Only one pair played this as a part score contract. They got all the way to two hearts which they just made. One pair went all the way to slam. Let's see if 13 tricks are there but would you see it at a card table? The opponents do not go around showing you their cards.

close to open north's cards with a one to trump bid. There are only 15 high card points but the five card suit is worth an extra point. Fortunately my partner steered clear of a no trump contract. After showing clubs and hearts the club contract was the final choice.

West made a good lead with the six of hearts. The card is very deceptive. It could be a short suit lead as well as a lead from a five card suit.

Declarer played the heart king and was surprised when East contributed the queen. He led the club queen and finesse losing to West's stiff queen.

West led back the heart deuce. What should declarer do? What would you do if you could only have seen the north-south cards? East could easily hold the queen — ten of hearts for his original play.

However, it doesn't matter what East holds. You should play the heart nine. If East has the ten he is welcome to it for now you have two good hearts in dummy upon which you can discard your loser. If East has the ten in the case, you still have two good hearts for discards.

The only way you could go
