

Says Farmers Ignored More Bramalea Voters

Mario Ferri, Norval farmer, has accused Chinguacousy council of abandoning its rural constituents for the greater voting power in Bramalea.

Addressing the finance committee last week, he charged that council had not given the leadership or representation required and expected by its rural voters.

SUDDEN RISE

"If you were concerned about us, I would expect you to say something about reassessment," he said. "Even our own councillor, Leonard Butt, isn't concerned. If he was, he would have come to some of our Mayfield meetings." (Mayfield ratepayers met to discuss the sudden rise in taxes, under the new assessments and urged members to withhold the first instalment of their taxes.)

FOUGHT

As examples of concerned councils, he cited those in Vaughan Township and Mississauga. "When they were hit by reassessment," he said, "their councils came out and fought against it, trying to get it changed."

DOESN'T CARE

"Well, what have your actions done?" Mr. Ferri asked. "In Chinguacousy we've been paying at the new rate for two going on three years, while this is the first year for both Mississauga and Vaughan. Yet the provincial government has introduced a bill to ease it for them. Doesn't the province care about us?"

ONLY WAY

Reeve Williams said that acceptance of the provincial bill was not an improvement in the assessment situation. "It is acceptance in principle of the inequities of reassessment."
