Think of all the cool things about a frost-free refrigerator freezer.

Every housewife should have one. Frost never forms. Not in the big refrigerator section. Not in the big freezer section. So there's no defrosting. Ever. And you know what that means.

No more dripping water to mop up. No more waiting for frost to melt. Your ice cube trays won't stick any more. No more re-freezing frozen foods.

You'll have more storage space, because you'll be free of all frost accumulation. And your frozen foods won't stick together.

Think about it.

Think of all the extra space you'll have for stocking up on food bargain!

And besides all that, think how much more attractive your kitchen will look with a sleek new frost-free refrigerator freezer.

Sweet Memories of Dominion Day

One of the last, and one of the few traditional Canadian holidays is under attack by the fermites who want to turn every holiday into a holiday weekend.

The grand old 24th of May, with scorched fingers and the pungent stink of firecrackers, has been whittled into just another Monday holiday. They're chipping away at Remembrance Day.

And the only day of truly national Canadian importance celebrating the birth of our nation, is due to go under to the pressures of commercialism. Hardly anybody calls it Dominion Day anymore, and some industries and business firms simply ignore it.

When I was an urchin, it was an impressive holiday. There were bands and baseball games, parades and panoply and interminable speeches about our great Dominion, the Fathers of Confederation, ties with Empire, and what a great guy the Mayor was.

It meant that school was really over, at last, that endless glorious summer had finally begun. It was a strong punctuation mark in the year.

If you had a cottage, it meant your dad had a key off to drive the family there, get them settled, get the bat out. It was often an all day job for the old man, with an average of about three flat tires en route.

If you didn't have a cottage and most didn't, you went to the ball game or swam in the river, or went fishing, or had a family picnic. If you had a car. Many didn't.

Those were peaceful days in the small town. There was no frantic scramble for the tourist dollar because there were few tourists. Summer was a time to take it easy. The days were hot and long, the evenings were full of hot smells and children's voices, and parents rocking on the front porch. Lemonade or apple cream cone topped off the day, which seemed 66 hours of enjoying life.

What change in those (comparative) few years. Today, with good roads, a car in every garage, and a restless populace, summer begins back around faster, with thousands thronging the highways to get somewhere.

I'm not complaining, or trying to hold up progress, whatever that is. Just feeling a bit nostalgic about the leisurely pace of those days, and wondering why we're all rushing around like nuts, today. But I can tell you one thing. The clip of a horse and buggy on a summer evening was a lot better than the squeal of tires and the bellow of motor-bikes.

This summer, I'm in a bit of a dilemma. I'd half planned to go to England and Scotland, and just mosey around looking up some old pubs, old cathedrals and old girlfriends.

But my wife isn't keen. She's not much for pubs, considers one old cathedral much like another, and would probably come to verbal blows with the old girlfriends.

To clinch the latter both our student offspring are among the vast army of unemployed. At least Hugh hasn't a job. Last report Kim had one, as she ex-

Even if something wears out you save money.

As we all know, Volkswagens don't change much from year to year. So the parts that make up a Volkswagen, therefore, don't change much either. (And if we don't spend a lot on new parts—neither do you.)

Also, the way we fix VW's ends up saving you money as well. Because behind every Volkswagen dealership is a staff of factory-trained VW mechanics. Each one a graduate of the Volkswagen School of Horrors.

There, we make them take VW's apart and put them together and take them apart and put them together until they can almost do it with their eyes shut. And again, since Volkswagens don't change much, our mechanics get plenty of practice (and plenty good at) servicing them. Which keeps labour charges down.

And if you don't need a brand new part, they'll fix you up with a brand new old part. (Our exchange parts work just as well as new ones—they just don't cost as much.)

And lately, we've come up with what might be the ultimate money-saving device. Our new VW Diagnosis System. With all its electronic eyes and ears, it can see and hear things that a mechanic can't. And actually spot trouble before it happens.

And you don't have to pay for something that doesn't happen.
