Mayoralty Candidates State Platforms to Kin

BILL SMITH

RON DODOKIN

Emmerson will relinquish at the year end.

Mr. Smith is appealing to voters on his record of municipal service, plus a promise to work for a train or bus GO service to metro, re-development of Central Park in the highway conservation area, additional artificial ice facilities, and a movie theatre.

SMALL PERCENTAGE

Mr. Dodokin claims that town councils have represented the interests of a small percentage of the population, and hopes to demonstrate that a far larger group also has an interest in local government.

He is concerned with inadequate physical premises for the police department. If Georgetown does not expand these, he says, when the province takes over local policing, the community with the best facilities will be headquarters and a police force could be some miles distant.

He is boosting a co-ordinated parks and recreation plan, with the Recreation Committee able to make recommendations to council and planning committee.

Two candidates for mayor in Georgetown's December 7 election, stated their platforms when they were guests at a Kinsmen Club meeting Monday.

William R. (Bill) Smith, a councillor for eight years and Ron Dodokin are the only announced candidates to date for the post which Mayor Wheldon held.

Mr. Dodokin is critical of the current council, feeling that too much business is conducted in committee.

In his council experience, Mr. Smith points to chairmanship of seven council committees during his 8 years in office. He took part in such major decisions as purchasing the Cedarvale recreation property, arena improvements and extension of its use year round with roller skating and a program of road improvement.

Mr. Dodokin, a partner in the law firm of Dodokin and Sopinka lives with his wife and family at 15 Park Ave.

Mr. Smith, an employee of Canadian Industries Ltd., lives at 6 Mackenzie Dr. with his wife and family.
