his letter of resignation be told the Halton East New Democratic Party executive he could not run as their candidate in the coming provincial election because of "certain personal setbacks during the past month."

"I now find myself in a most difficult position, and because of these personal difficulties I have no alternative but to withdraw," he said.

He concluded, "while I am withdrawing from active political participation, you may rest assured my hopes and aspirations are still with the NDP, and they may count on my continued support."

A committee is currently busy seeking out prospective candidates.
