The size and cost of additions to the sewage plant was the third issue to be discussed. Cr. Ern Hyde explained that one scheme, the cheaper, would be a large enough addition to service the town as it exists today. "If the town wants the smaller scheme," he stated, "it would be up to McLaughlin to provide sewage treatment for that part he wants to develop," he remarked.

Mayor Bill Smith reminded Winters none of the Brumac proposals regarding sewage have been satisfactory to the town. Cr. Ernie Sykes maintained the decision on the sewage treatment plant was urgent. He stated the tertiary treatment and nutrient removal was mandatory, but the decision to ser-

Set Out Major Obstacles -

BY-PASS, INDUSTRY, SEWAGE, ISSUES FOR TOWN & FOCAL

At the end of a two hour discussion between Georgetown council and Ron Winters, engineer for Focal Properties, previously known as Brumac Developments, in committee last week, nothing was resolved but three issues were clearly set out as major obstacles.

The first one for Focal Properties was the route of the proposed Georgetown by-pass. Ron Winters said he had been unable to find out the route, despite months of trying. He contended no plan of land south of Silver Creek could be submitted until this was known as the by-pass would probably cut through their land.

The ultimate size of Georgetown controlled partly by the Toronto-Centred Region Plan, would also affect the route of the by-pass, he stated, as he endorsed a suggestion by deputy reeve Art Speight that council consider what size they think the town should be.

TREAD WATER
The second contentious issue, industrial land, was stressed when Reeve Ric Morrow pointed out that council felt industrial land should be provided in the area Focal wants to develop. Winters replied that McLaughlin felt the agreement he bought from Delrex Developments would cover that area, too.

"We could stop growth right now at 17,500," said the mayor "a lot of people would like that and the land down there could stay farmland."

Cr. Ern Hyde agreed, "We're in a good position to stand still and tread water for a while," he commented.

Cr. Phil Siddall pointed out the present industrial land owned by Focal Properties has not been developed.

SEWAGE PLANT SIZE
The size and cost of additions to the sewage plant was the third issue to be discussed. Cr. Ern Hyde explained that one scheme, the cheaper, would be a large enough addition to service the town as it exists today. "If the town wants the smaller scheme," he stated, "it would be up to McLaughlin to provide sewage treatment for that part he wants to develop," he remarked.

Mayor Bill Smith reminded Winters none of the Brumac proposals regarding sewage have been satisfactory to the town. Cr. Ernie Sykes maintained the decision on the sewage treatment plant was urgent. He stated the tertiary treatment and nutrient removal was mandatory, but the decision to ser-
