Rule Permit Needed For Trailer Verandah

A verandah added to a mobile home requires a building permit. Esqueasing council decided Monday night.

Kenneth Rootes who owns a mobile home in Willow Park, Norval, added a verandah, but the building inspector Tom McLean said he felt he should have a permit.

Mr. Rootes came to council, admitting he probably was in the wrong, but stated it never occurred to him he needed a permit, since the trailer is still on wheels and is not a permanent building.

LIKE A PATIO

"Do you intend to close it in?" asked Cr. Dick Howitt. "No," replied Mr. Rootes. "It is just like a patio."

The building inspector said the trailer was in an area covered in the trailer by-law and the verandah looked attractive.

Council decided to issue the permit.
