Norval Still Wants Own Kindergarten.

Norval ratepayers have not given up their fight to have a kindergarten in Norval school, so a letter from Julian Reed to the Halton County Board of Education revealed last week. Reed said parents don't like the idea of taking children by bus to kindergartens in Glen Williams and Pineview schools. "While only 12 children are registered for fall kindergarten at this time, we now have parents who are deliberately failing to register because of the unsatisfactory situation here", Reed said in his letter.

He also said the ratepayers could provide the accommodation and the board provide the teacher and equipment. He added that use of church basements had been offered.

Parents have been asking the board to establish a kindergarten in the school, but the Board maintains there are not enough pupils.

A month ago the ratepayers won their battle to keep the school open.
