

Georgetown Students Learning Army Life

Brampton Armoury isn't standing there quietly on guard - every day it's a hive of activity as students involved in the federal government's summer program for students learn the basics of soldiering.

The group of 27 students involved in the headquarters training phase of the two-part summer employment program come from the Brampton, Oakville and Georgetown areas, and most of them had little, if anything to do with the militia before this summer.

The program is being carried out at the local level by the Lorne Scots regiment of Peel, Dufferin, Halton and they are supplying the instructors to teach the students the basics of the soldier's job.

students in field work such as digging trenches and foxholes, house clearing operations and even a route march. The youths marched from Brampton to the Nashville reservoir near Bolton last week for a day stay under canvas.

Survival
The second segment of the overall portion of the plan in which the Lorne Scots are participating is for second-year students or militia members. It also involves six weeks of training but all of it is carried out at CFB Petawawa.

This program offers leadership training up to junior non-commissioned officer standards and adventure training. The first is obvious but adventure training deserves some explanation.

In this portion of the program the youths go out into the bush for exercises and survival training, spend time in assault boats and scale cliffs as well as learning in classroom type session other aspects of the infantryman's job.

The course includes methods of instruction techniques, leadership and initiative training, range classification and field and battle craft and sports and recreation.

Three Sections
The program is divided into three sections making up a total of six weeks training for which the students receive $350.

The first phase, general military training, was carried out in the first three weeks of the course and involved the students in parade-ground drill and formations, first aid, rifle instruction with the FN automatic rifle which is the standard infantry arm, communications and map use.

Discipline
Nineteen members of the Lorne Scots are participating in this program.

Lieutenant Maurice Rowe, the officer commanding the students and instructors involved in the program, said the students seem to be enjoying the program and seem to be getting something out of it.

"They are getting more than adequate physical training from the program as well as sufficient military discipline. Which they take quite well. We hope they will come away from this course with more self discipline and a sense of responsibility," he said.

Dig Trenches
Phase 3 will be an eight-day tour at Canadian Forces Base Petawawa where the students will live in tents, and undergo qualification with the FN rifle on the ranges, learn minor tactics and become involved in exercises with formations up to the company level.

Physical education is stressed throughout the program. The physical training aspect comes to the fore in the second phase of the program which, as well as teaching the things mentioned, involves the

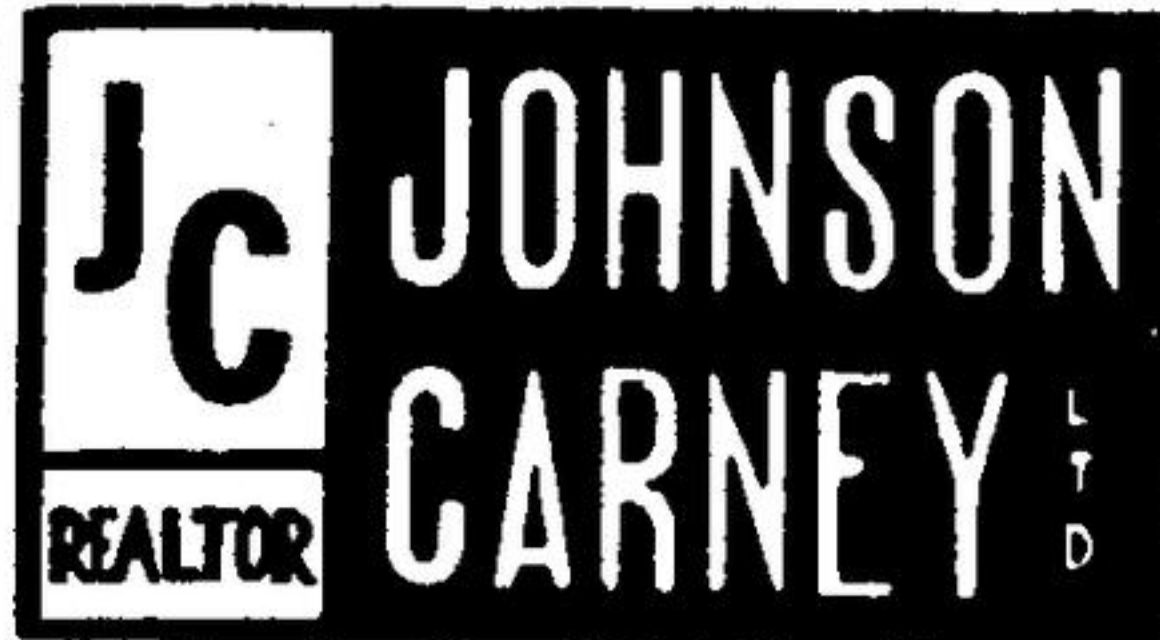

Employment
Lieutenant Rowe said the main aim of the course is to provide students with summer employment, but that the Lorne Scots hope to benefit from it as well. They hope that some of the students involved in the program will become interested enough to join the militia.
