Try to Prevent Christmas Neurosis

Many people suffer from what psychiatrists often call "Christmas neurosis". The season to be jolly often makes them sad and the holiday makes them lonely.

And in reaction to it, some people may drink too much or engage in other activities in which they don't normally engage.

The Thanksgiving-Christmas period is a time for family centered festivities and those who might have any various kinds of unfinished business with their family - or who have no family - have a greater tendency at this time to experience loneliness, depression, sadness - a missing of togetherness.

People with problems in family relationships tend to react particularly at the holiday season. Memories and nostalgia can bring to surface feelings which are ordinarily repressed. The past memories may be unpleasant, as over failure to receive or give gifts, disappointment with gifts, deaths, in the family or ugly arguments at Christmas time.

FALLS
Falls are the number one cause of accidents in the home and a major cause of accidents at work. Falls can happen on stairs that are too slippery or have boxes, etc. on them. They happen from weak and broken rungs on ladders. From spilled liquids and icy surfaces in winter. From using boxes and chairs as temporary ladders. So, take a look around and make your home fall-proof.
