Franc Sturino Assesses Needs, Helps Fill Them

A 23 year old community worker, Franc Sturino, has been working unobtrusively in town since the beginning of June. He is a graduate student in counselling psychology from Waterloo University, hired by the Department of Health.

ASSESS NEEDS

He feels the major function of a community worker is to assess the needs of the town and to work with existing social services and organizations to help fill that need.

The town, through the Recreation Committee, donated office space at Cedarvale for him.

After spending the first two weeks here just talking to people he concluded there was a need for a place for the youth to congregate, and "just talk"

COFFEE HOUSE

At the same time, Initiative '72 decided there was a need for a coffee house, so Franc worked with them to help bring it to reality. He stresses that "Initiative '72" did by far the major share of work and planning themselves. Now that this project is launched he is looking around for other ways of reaching the young people of the town.
