Snow Took Steps to Avoid Any Conflicts of Interest

By Edmund Shea
Halton East MPP James Snow, Ontario's minister of government services, voluntarily laid bare his personal business dealings at a meeting with press representatives last week.

The 43-year-old former contractor, listing all direct and indirect assets of himself and his family, said he no longer holds any interests in public companies and has disposed of holdings in all private firms which might result in possible conflict of interest.

He also stressed that another reason for gradually disposing of business interests since he was first elected to the Legislature in 1967 was his increasing government duties, and that none of the companies he still has holdings in do business with the provincial government.

First appointed to the Cabinet in 1971, Snow prepared the detailed list for Premier William Davis after the recent controversy over attorney-general Dalton Bailey buying land near the proposed Pickering airport at a time when the government was considering encouraging growth east of Metro Toronto.

PERSONAL HOLDINGS
The Bailey affair was followed by the second controversy to rock the Davis cabinet within a month when provincial treasurer Darcy McKeough resigned over alleged conflict of interest.

McKeough was reported to have approved subdivision of land in his hometown of Chatham owned by a company in which he had a financial interest in December, 1969, while he was minister of municipal affairs.

Snow's report was filed with Davis' office on August 14 and copies omitting property value estimates were made available to the press at last week's meeting in Toronto.

CONSTRUCTION
Holdings of Snow Construction Ltd., are: a commercial building on Argus Rd. in Oakville which is mainly occupied by the company itself; 50 per cent share ownership of Oakville Investments Ltd., which formerly owned land on the west side of Sixteen Mile Creek in trust for the massive Park 16 project's developers and decided to the town of Oakville in a complicated land swap for the proposed hi-rise residential-commercial complex; about 40 per cent share ownership of Park Sixteen Ltd., and 100 per cent ownership of Tube Benders and Fabricators Ltd., a Streetsville manufacturing company which Snow said he has given "explicit instructions" not to accept government contracts.

Snow and his wife also hold 100 per cent shares in Snow Properties Ltd., an investment and holding company, in trust for their four children.

He disposed of shares in public companies such as Consumers Gas Ltd., and Interprovincial Pipelines within a few weeks of joining the cabinet in March 1971.

Snow said he sold these voluntarily as he felt it was necessary and added the shares would have been worth considerably more than their inflated 1971 prices if they had been sold now.

DISPOSING
He said the commercial section of the Park 16 project will probably not contain any government facilities but pointed out he can be out-voted in any future decision as he is not a controlling shareholder in Park Sixteen Ltd.

His Tube Benders company, which he bought about two years ago, does not manufacture components for the aircraft, electronics, appliance, automotive and hardware industries and thus he doesn't know if any parts will eventually end up in a government-ordered product such as an aircraft.

In most cases, the company's clients do not disclose the ultimate destination of parts ordered he said.

Snow started disposing of any interests which could result in possible conflict of interest before taking his seat in the Legislature in early 1968.

NO WAY
However, he said, "there is no way a person can dispose of all his assets.

"After all, I have a family business which has been in operation for over 20 years. I have two sons growing up that I hope will run that business some day."

Formed in 1948 when Snow was 19 years old and incorporated in 1951, Snow Construction Ltd., is now wrapping up supervision of construction of a small business building on Speers Rd. and will be inoperative after that

PROTECT FUTURE
He said that although a cabinet minister's $35,000 annual salary is adequate despite the extra costs incurred by the post, even government ministers have to protect their own future against the day they opt out of the government or are defeated in an election.

Snow was appointed minister without portfolio in March 1971, minister of public works in February 1972, and to his present governmental services portfolio in April

Life is Back to Almost Normal for Wanda Bryan

by Catherine Ford
It's a nasty, dirty disease and it respects no one. It can reduce a healthy, athletic man to a vegetable in no time; it can make a small child hate life, because life is no fun — it can strike your son, your daughter, father, brother, wife or parents.

Kidney disease is one of the horrid facts of life for thousands of people.

People like 12-year-old Wanda Bryan, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bryan of Georgetown.

By the time she was taken to the Hospital for Sick Children both of her kidneys were diseased. A few months later, she was in convulsions. She had no kidney function at all.

The little girl, who became "more vegetable" than child, says her mother, spent nearly two years on peritoneal dialysis — three days at a time — and nine months on regular dialysis, through a vein in her arm or leg.

The dialysis gave Wanda her only hope for life — a machine which cleaned her blood of bodily wastes which would gradually poison her. The machine took over the job normally done by the kidneys. But it's an exhausting and annoying — physically and emotionally — way to live. Especially peritoneal dialysis — done through the stomach — because the child's veins are usually too small to be used for this process.

Two years ago this pale and thin child received a new lease on life — a donor had been found. She would receive a kidney which hopefully would not be rejected by her body.

BACK TO NORMAL
It could be compared to being re-born. The transplant "took" and Wanda was released from having to live with machines. Now, each day is new and bright — she's back in George Kennedy Public School, in Grade 5 (having lost two years because of illness), back riding her bicycle and back to living almost a normal life.

Mrs. Joan Moore, 19 Argyle Cres., president of the Bramalea chapter of the Kidney Foundation of Canada — which has "adopted" Wanda as their mascot — says Wanda would not have had to wait for two years for a new kidney if the national kidney foundation's organ donor program received wider support. "If we took only half of the people killed in car accidents, we could probably transplant all of the patients now waiting," she says.

The difference in the patient after a transplant "is like night and day", says Mrs. Moore.

SLEEPY, LISTLESS
Wanda had been a healthy and active child, although small for her age, until she turned eight. When she didn't seem to be growing, was sleeping and listless "all the time", says her mother, she went to a doctor. She went to the doctor many times and "gradually got worse", says Mrs. Bryan. Wanda was in and out of the hospital two or three times, until local doctors "did as much as they could."

kidney which hopefully would not be rejected by her body.
