January Ended Three Months of Bad Weather

by ROGER SMITH
The first three weeks of January were very dry and pleasant, as the bad weather of October, November and December 1972 finally came to an end.

Temperatures fell steadily early in the month, and stayed below average from Jan. 5 to 12. The lowest temperature, -13 degrees, was on Jan. 8, but this was not a record, it was 16 degrees in 1968 on that date. There was a generous amount of sunshine in the cool weather.

Gradually, the temperature moderated, and the week of Jan. 13-19 was very mild. The skies were cloudy at first but there were sunny intervals during the mildest weather. It was also quite windy from the S.W.

The highest temperature was 53 degrees on Jan. 18, which broke the old record (50, 1949) for the date. This was the warmest January day since Jan. 25, 1967, and the overnight low (40 degrees) was also a record.

MORE SEASONABLE
More seasonable weather returned on the weekend, with clear skies and moderately cold temperatures.

On Jan. 21, when this report was written, the average temperature for the month was 21 degrees (near the 30-year average of 19.4 degrees). However, there was only 3.0 inches of snow, and 102 hours of sunshine.

A continuation of these trends would break the existing records for January.

Council Wants Acton in Georgetown Phone Book

Esqueying council wants Acton listed in the Georgetown area telephone directory, they told W. C. Barnes, Public Relations Manager of the Bell Telephone, at last week's meeting. Finding that councilors made it clear the telephone directory of all places within the free calling area should be available free.

Barnes assured council there is no charge for directories covering the free calling areas. His statement was greeted with some scepticism by Deputy Reeve Len Cox, who said he had paid 75c for it, and by some ratepayers in the audience who said they also paid. Cr. George Maltby said he had to travel to Toronto to pick one up.

Barnes appeared at the council meeting to outline the company's two applications for rate increases, which are now before the Canadian Transport Commission, but found most councilors more interested in having the telephone directory system improved.

Deputy Reeve Cox suggested the Acton pages be included in the Georgetown book, while Reeve Tom Hill urged Grand Valley be dropped, and Acton added.

Resident Here For Over Sixty Years

A woman who spent most of her married life in Georgetown, Mrs. Harvey Sparling, 175 Main Street North, died in Georgetown hospital January 7. Born at Dorchester, she was the former Minnie Styles. The family moved to Watford when she was a child and she later lived in Sarnia, where she married Mr. Sparling in 1910. She had lived in Georgetown since then, with the exception of a few years in Toronto.

INFORMATION CHARGE

Barnes also told council the company is considering a charge of 25 cents for directory assistance calls asking for numbers that are already listed in the phone book. He claimed a survey showed 80 percent of the information calls are for numbers listed in the book. He said the charge would not apply to persons with sight handicaps or calls made from hotels or motels.

LOCALITY RATE

Rural settlements with a growing cluster of homes, will be considered for a rating known as a Locality Rate Area, where rates are lower than normal rural rates. Barnes said his company tries to keep an eye on growing communities, but would accept referrals from council. Hornby was recently classified as an LRA by the Bell.

TWO APPLICATIONS

The Public Relations Manager said Bell Canada has two applications before the CTC. The first, if approved, would raise the basic telephone service rate in the Georgetown exchange five cents per month and the installation cost of a residential phone from $11 to $16.50, and a business phone installation from $18 to $27. Barnes said there would also be a small adjustment on some long distance calls.
