Caldwell Stables Started With a Teenager's Whim

A teenage decision to buy a horse led not only Ed Caldwell, but his father Bob into the present Caldwell Stables, on the 8th Line. At that time Bob Caldwell, owner of the I.G.A. store since it opened here in 1954, had no thought of training and stabling horses, but his son's increasing interest, and gradual adding of horses through claiming races, resulted in this combined business and hobby.

The Horace Bell farm on the 8th Line, with an old stone farmhouse and barns. Shortly after, a racing track was added, the cow barn became a horse barn, and a new horse barn was built. The old milk house is now an office. They own eight standard bred horses for harness racing but train and board 17 more, mostly for Toronto owners.

everyday, usually four miles around the track, in all weather except rain. This means, of course, the driver of the jogging cart, either Bob or Ed, is also out in all kinds of weather. The jogging carts are used for training, not the lighter racing shells. The jogging cart also has longer shafts, so the driver is not quite so cramped as he is in racing position. The Caldwell's horses, either their own or their clients', race at Greenwood, Mohawk, and at the track overnight so they have to be trailered back and forth every morning and night when a meet is on. Considering there is night racing most places, that means not too much sleep for the man looking after the racer.

Garden City, with the Caldwell's own horses driven by Fred Hill. "Grattan Spencer" is their highest earner so far, but just how much he has earned wasn't volunteered.

IMPORTANT
The horse's feet are most important and receive their own type pedicure frequently. Tar and oil are applied to the hooves to prevent them drying out, and they even receive mud packs.

The well dressed horse can tour out for training in bell boots, which prevent trotters from hitting their feet together, shin boots, a precaution against brushing one leg against the other, or knee boots, for the knock kneed.

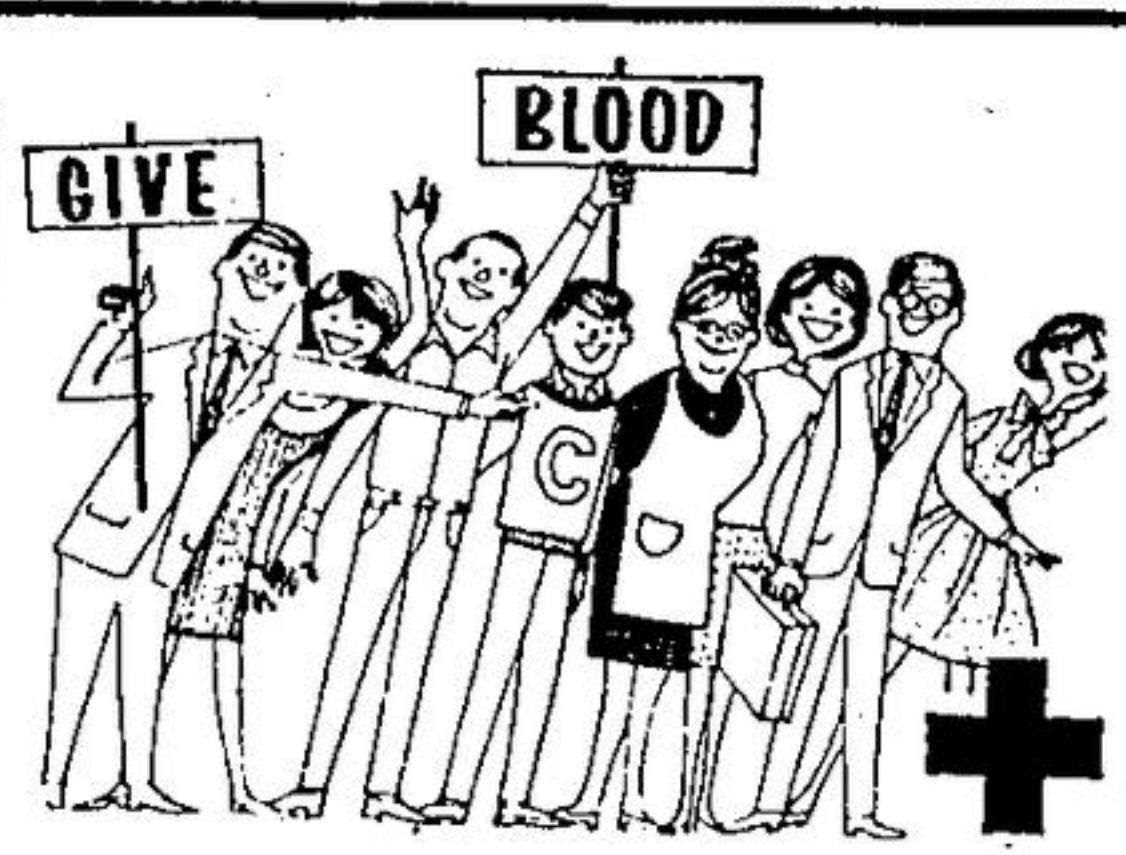

Giving blood to Red Cross takes only thirty minutes from start to finish including time for testing, rest and refreshment. The actual giving of your blood takes only 4 to 5 minutes.
