

MYRTLE BEACH SAYS HELLO I

Auld Outlines Solid Waste Management Policies

Ontario's present and future policies concerning waste management issues, such as landfill, recycling, and non-returnable containers, were outlined today by Environment Minister James Auld. The Minister made his remarks to the Grocery Products Manufacturers of Canada during their annual meeting in Toronto, at the Inn on the Park.

"The province has a very definite commitment to hold the line on the increase in the amount of garbage", Mr. Auld said. "Strong leadership will be taken in this field so that we cut down as much as possible on one-way disposable cartons; that will include cans, bottles, and plastic containers."

"We intend to promote the concept of reusability and discourage disposability", Mr. Auld stated. "We will also continue our studies on the practicability of home separation of some wastes and the development of uses for the material separated."

SEPARATION AND RECLAMATION PLANTS

Mr. Auld also announced Ontario's intention to investigate the development of central separation and reclamation plants and mentioned that the Ministry's Waste Management Branch is at the present time working on a proposal for an experimental pilot plant. The Ministry is also looking into potential markets for these separated materials since it would be, in Mr. Auld's words, "completely futile to build reclamation plants if the materials separated from the waste cannot be reused and must be dumped in a landfill."

C.P. Rail has approached the Ministry about the possibility of setting up a co-operative research project. A similar approach has been proposed by the Anglo-Canadian group which also involves a limited amount of separation and reclamation, the remainder of the waste being ground, baled, and subsequently disposed of by landfill. Both these plans involve transporting the waste to be landfilled to a site outside Metro Toronto.

"Its location will, of course, depend on the acceptability of the proposals upon which public hearings will be held within the next month or two", Mr. Auld emphasized.

WASTE AS AN ENERGY SOURCE

The Ministry's Waste Management Branch is also investigating the use of waste as an energy source and two studies will be carried out this year, Mr. Auld said. One on the use of ground garbage as a fuel additive in cement kilns; another on its use in conjunction with coal or oil to produce electricity. In the latter case, the advantages of some degree of separation prior to burning will also be examined. The removal of metals, glass, and organic materials such as vegetable waste would have marked advantages, he said.

LANDFILL SITES NECESSARY

"Whatever this Ministry does to help, there is no question that now and for some years to come, Metro Toronto, like the rest of Ontario, must continue to depend on landfill for the disposal of a large proportion of its waste", declared Ontario's Environment Minister. "Even if central reclamation plants were in operation right now, a substantial proportion of the total waste produced in a municipality would still have to be disposed of by landfill."

Emphasizing that landfill would have to be used until technological advance made other methods more practical, Mr. Auld said, "I have no intention of encouraging or coercing any municipality into building an expensive white elephant using unproven processes and producing material, the bulk of which has no real value and would still have to be disposed of by landfill."

"The landfill of waste at a properly located and operated site will not pollute the environment, impose hazards to health, or any significant degree of nuisance, even to the residents immediately adjacent", he underlined. "A landfill site like any other large construction project is certainly not the most desirable of neighbours and it would be foolish to pretend that it is."

Mr. Auld went on to point out that in some ways, landfill is the most flexible disposal method since a stage development leading to reclamation can readily be planned and incorporated, particularly if rail-haul transportation is proved feasible. "For all these reasons, I must support the acquisition by Metro Toronto of sites suitable for sanitary landfill, but I must distinguish between support in principle of the need to acquire landfill sites and approval to use specific sites wherever they are located."

"I can state quite categorically that under no circumstances will any site be approved where valid objections have been raised which cannot be overcome by changes in the design or the operation of the site, or if the requirements of the Act and Regulation cannot be met."

Before any particular site is approved, all the procedures laid down in the Environmental Protection Act must be followed, including public hearings before the Environmental Hearing Board.

LOANS TO MUNICIPALITIES

"As more sophisticated techniques are adopted, vastly greater initial capital costs will be needed", said Mr. Auld. "The situation closely resembles that of twenty years ago in the sewage and water treatment field. I have, therefore, recommended a program which will provide loans to municipalities for capital expenditures resulting from the implementation of waste management area planning studies, on the same basis as loans are provided for sewage treatment plants. I hope that this program can be started soon and will encourage municipalities to adopt more sophisticated techniques."

These studies are designed to encourage waste management planning for large geographical areas without undue regard to political boundaries, by the provision of 50 percent provincial grants. "Seven of these studies are now underway and others will be started this year", Mr. Auld announced.

Summing up the province's position, he emphasized that the government is committed to an in-depth view of solid waste problems and would be bringing forward a comprehensive report of the provincial situation. This would enable plans to be made, "not only for next year or the year after, but for the distant future; we want this province to have a blueprint of how its waste problems can be managed."

Castling Completed

Brush With a Body GLT's May Play

Georgetown Little Theatre Group has started preparations for its last play of the 1972-1973 season, "Brush with a Body" by Maurice McLoughlin. Casting has been completed and rehearsals are already in progress under director Harry Haylock.

Producers Derek Joyne and Isla McConnell have assembled their production staff and all departments are busy with the groundwork that is necessary before their separate efforts can be assembled into a complete production.

NOT DISCOURAGED

Rather than be discouraged by the recent adjudication of "Delicate Balance" as some people may expect, the group has been spurred on to even greater efforts, and if the enthusiasm of those involved in any measure, "Brush with a Body" should be a great success.

The play is a comedy-murder mystery and should have wide audience appeal.

The normal three night run is scheduled for early May at Wigglesworth School.
