

LACKED GEORGETOWN LOVELIES (Herald Photo)

There weren't any Georgetown lovelies in this year's Miss Nude World pageant at the Four Seasons Nature Resort, near Freedom, but there were some Georgetown residents among the spectators. In the interest of discretion, they're somewhere among this portion of the large crowd that witnessed the show, won by Dee Dee Nodel of San Bernardino, Calif. The show has grown by leaps and bounds and featured 33 entrants from across North America this year, who barged everything in the bid for the title. Title honors this year were worth about $10,000 to the winner.

Recreation Time Warp Exists in Georgetown

KEITH ROBINSON

I bet you thought that this title is the prelude to a very intellectually stimulating article. See, I fooled you again. It's only me. Me, the great wonder-boy of journalistic trivia. Yep, I'm back again. You know, I'm really quite stubborn; terribly hard to get off.

Well, if you have gotten this far you might as well finish the article.

There appears to be a controversy raging in Georgetown. It seems to center around the inability of the younger members of this community to keep themselves occupied.

The kids say that there is nothing for them to do in town. Flipping the coin over we see that the parents feel that there are a lot of things to do. They feel that the problem is just that the other guys kids are just lazy and shiftless. The inevitable comment starts with "when I was your age, the person said that he didn't have a quarter of the facilities but that he could not remember ever being bored when he was young."

That statement is like having an airplane fly to pilot.

Much as I hate to say it, especially after observing a lot of the future leaders of Georgetown, who are nothing special; I have to agree with the kids on this point.

The reason for this stand is a bit more complicated than just trying to irritate the fossils that be of Georgetown.

The simple fact is that if there was something for the kids to do they would be doing it. Right? Of course, why wouldn't they?

Again we fall into the trap of setting up for one generation something that another generation would have liked and appreciated. Then it is expected that this appreciation would be a continuous thing.

As far as I am concerned the most glaring examples of this takes place in the athletic organization in Georgetown. For instance one can go to just about any night of the week to the Charles Street park and watch a baseball game. Invariably one sees all these games and daddies watching their offspring prove how great their parents are.

These adults sit in their lawn chairs and applaud the heroes of their children. They see themselves in their children. The child is not a person he is a sacrifice to the old man's ego.

First of all how many kids stick with an organized activity for a number of years. Very few of them. Why, because they do not feel that they belong to it or rather to them.

Here is a suggestion. Why not leave the kids alone. Well not entirely alone. Supply the rudiments of organization, but don't force or pressure the kid. Don't make the kids feel that it is their duty to perform for their parents. That is not what the kids really want to do.

Let him or her be. They will be able to stretch themselves. After all you, did it when you were young. He's your kid.

Let the kids do something for themselves; besides provide entertainment for the parents.

What do the kids of Georgetown do with their time. The answer that you would like and expect to hear is that they do not do much. They walk the streets and hang around the plaza. Compared to the standards of their parents, all that the kids do is waste time and money, money which the parents for the most part, are only willing to provide.

Another thing that is involved here is the concept of dependence. By keeping the kids dependent on the parents you increase the self-importance of the parents.

What the whole situation boils down to is that the adult generation again proves their inability to understand things that they do not wish to. They have set up a system of activities that would have appealed to them, or rather you, when you were young. Then they feel hurt when the kids reject their great ideas. This misunderstanding is the essence of the generation gap, but I think I better leave that discussion to another time.

LEGION NOTES

Pipes And Drums Play In Toronto

by WRIGHT SMITH

Aug. 16 saw the pipes and drums of Branch 120 in Toronto, they took part in the parade of massed pipe bands down Yonge St. to mark the opening of the Canadian National Exhibition.

Also taking part in the parade were bands from as far afield as the U.K., Nova Scotia, B.C., the U.S. and one from Brittany, France, but the stars of the event (for my money anyway) must have been the pipes and drums of the Gurkha Regt., those wiry guys from the Himalaya's can really put on a show.

Aug. 18 was Warriors Day at the Ex and once again the pipe band was well to the fore in the march, assisted by John Beattie, who carried the branch colors, and Ken McLeod.

The lucky steak-hunters at Friday night's dart shoot were:—Tom James (2) Steve Hillier, Woody Hamilton (2) Mac McLean, Lloyd Grozell, Ron Dumper, Art (Chic) Huberts, and Bobby Williams.

Car draw number 25 also was made on Friday. Names from the drum were, Don Wilson, Bill Hanson, Helen King, Paul Hale, Florence Walker and C. Peterson.

There was no mini-bingo on Saturday evening because the bingo officials were on holiday. The musicaling was supplied by the Road Runners.

Bub Waites tells me that names are wanted for the Tuesday night mixed dart league, six on each team, men and women. You don't have to be good, just lots of fun, and you don't have to be a Legion member to participate. So come on, you gals and guys, put your names down on the sports notice board. Starting date is Sept. 11, Tuesday.

By now all Imperial Section members should have received their flyers giving them the details of the barbecue on Saturday. Just bring your lawn chairs and knives and forks.

THINKING OF $ AND ¢? PRO-SIL MAKES A LOT OF SENSE!

PRO-SIL is the ideal additive for corn silage. In addition to making corn silage a complete ration, PRO-SIL is an essential ingredient in the production of milk and meat.

PRO-SIL is a liquid silage additive which eliminates the nutritional deficiencies of corn silage. It is highly efficient and particularly recommended in the feeding of dairy heifers and milking cows, with truly amazing results. PRO-SIL added to corn silage is a proven, easy, and economical way of putting weight on feedlot cattle. Why not talk it over with satisfied users? Better still, discuss it with your BROCKVILLE CHEMICAL INDUSTRIES representative. Silago is one of his specialties — and he can provide you with all the facts!

PRO-SIL. A better way of giving Nature a helping hand.
