

A LARGE number of the steam and antique machinery admired by visitors to Milton's Steam-Era Show on the holiday weekend had Georgetown and area owners. Here John Bailey of Norval explains the operation of a pump engine displayed by John Brander, RRI Norval.

THIS IMPRESSIVE steam tractor is always a highlight of the annual Steam-Era Show in Milton. It is owned by Wilfrid Leslie, an RRI Georgetown farmer and member of Equeusing Township council.

THIS OLD Sawyer-Massey tractor is typical of the antique farm equipment inspected by thousands at the Steam-Era Show in the Milton fairgrounds on the holiday weekend. Almost all of the old steam machinery was in working condition.

ASHGROVE NEWS

A community shower was held in the basement of Hillcrest Church for Janice Cox, a September bride-to-be. After a short musical program, which described the bride's school days and growing up days—acted out by Karen, Dale and Beverly Wickson, Susan

Alexander and Carolyn Bird, Janice was asked to occupy the special chair on the prettily-decorated platform. With her wedding attendants she opened the many useful and beautiful gifts for which she thanked everyone. Mrs. Ford Wickson, Mrs. J.M. Bird, Mrs. Robert Alexander and Mrs. G. Chester were also thanked for arranging the lovely evening.

The month of September is special for some of our folks. On Sept. 11, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Nurse will celebrate their 25 wedding anniversary; on Sept. 17, Mr. and Mrs. J.M. Wickson their 54 anniversary; and on Sept. 27, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ruddle their 51; Sept. 4, for Mr. and Mrs. James Carney; Sept. 9, for Mr. and Mrs. John McNoby; Sept. 15, for Mr. and Mrs. Fred Nurse; and September 17 for Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cunningham. To them all we say hope you have many more.

Everyone wants to say happy birthday to Mr. Fred Wrigglesworth and Mrs. Cecil Wilson who celebrate the same day, Sept. 21. So, while the summer slips away, September has for you, your day of days, so have some fun today and tomorrow too.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Van Allen of St. Petersburg, Fla., were weekend visitors recently with Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Wilson.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Thompson along with Mr. and Mrs. Larry Pickett, Lisa and Laurie of Acton, enjoyed some holidays at Severn Bridge in Forest Glen resort along the Trent Canal.

Clergy Comment

Can Contact Centre Handle Emergency?

by Richard Ruggie, Minister of Glen Williams and Norval Anglican Churches

The local Y is planning to start a phone service in the fall, for people to call in for help with their problems, be they big or small. One of the questions asked by a number of people interested in the service is will it be able to cope with people in extreme situations, who are contemplating taking their own lives. It is no idle question, for similar phone centres in other communities are confronted with those very problems.

We don't like to talk about suicide, understandably. But to avoid the question when we are faced with it can be dangerous. Doctors have sometimes suggested that people be kept in hospital for their own safety, only to have relatives refuse on the grounds that it couldn't happen in their family. Unfortunately events sometimes prove the relatives wrong. Even individuals who may be thinking about taking their lives are reluctant to seek help, to be open about those thoughts, with someone in their family, or a doctor or a clergyman.

Distress centres have found that women are more likely to call than men. That may be partly a reflection of the fact that more women than men attempt suicide—but just as many men go through with it. By keeping their feelings to themselves, the men denied themselves possible avenues of help.

It used to be possible to show that suicide rates were higher in towns than in the country, higher for the old than the young, higher for men than women, for protestants than for Catholics.

But more and more young people are making the attempt. And clergymen who have served in the area have had the impression that if anything the rates are higher in the small communities we have here than in the cities. Extreme loneliness seems to be one of the factors that drives people on, but you can be just as lonely in a small town—or even in a family—as in a city.

People's motives are very complex, and there are few easy solutions to their problems. Those who are deeply depressed may need professional help. But a prominent psychologist who has studied suicide suggests that many people who have attempted it were simply unhappy, and in our society we are unused or unable to deal with emotional pain.

Tranquillizers may help us to dull the symptoms, but they won't help us to face the problem. With the book of Ecclesiastes, we have to learn that there is a time to weep and to mourn, as well as to laugh and dance.

The gospel itself has no simple answers, though it does affirm a hope, and a value to life, that many have lost. The first step, however, is to stop treating suicide as a taboo, and if such feelings plague us, to seek help.

Sorry For Error

The Herald is sorry to report an error in the wedding write up of Catherine Jean Wilson and Paul Robinson. It should have read Anna Zanevra of Milton was maid of honor and Susan McCaig, Huntington, Quebec, and Beth Laidlaw, of Norval, all friends of the bride, and Janet Robinson, sister of the groom were bridesmaids.
