If you're serious about sound... listen to this:
 RCA has always been serious about sound. In fact, when you think back, we're the people who started it all. Recently, we have come up with an advancement in stereo which we call Quant-Aural sound.
 In designing the Quant-Aural sound system our engineers began at the end with the speaker pictured here.
 Conventional speakers are braced firmly against the frame, dependent on the structure of the cabinet to reproduce full sounds. This not only restricts cabinet design, but also the speakers' ability to vibrate freely and reproduce every note.
 RCA engineers developed a new kind of speaker that "floats free" of the design it is in. They achieved this new freedom by isolating the speakers from the cabinet by mounting the speaker cones on soft elastomer rims in an airtight, self-enclosed chamber. And these airtight chambers allow freedom from distortion. Every sound is projected from the front of the speaker for precise clarity, and backwave cancellation is virtually eliminated.
 Our new Quant-Aural speakers, then, can faithfully reproduce the full range of notes in a wide range of shades.
 The model pictured above is part of our famous Heritage collection. A strong, impressive design finished in Antiqued Chateau Fruitwood, this stereo set is built for people who want to invest in a beautiful piece of furniture as well as a beautiful sound.

RYDERS TV
What You Should Know About Color TV
 One of the most amazing things about color TV is the lowering cost of owning one. While prices of many articles are going up, the price of color TV continues to come down. Obviously labor costs are going up in the television industry as everywhere else. Cost of research must be high because of so many improvements each year. But there is keen competition at all levels, manufacturing, wholesaling, and retailing. In fact Statistics Canada shows that the category of goods which includes TV as sold predominantly by independent merchants. The figure given is consistently above 80 percent. Obviously the independents contribute to the exceptional price stability. With such a large share of the market collectively, the independent stores such as ours find themselves in a favorable bargaining position at the wholesale level. Simply, we represent a very large share of the supplier's client when taken as a group. We at Ryder's TV appreciate this position and realize it is only possible through the support of the consumer which Statistics Canada shows overwhelmingly in favor of the independent merchant. The special we advertise elsewhere in this newspaper are a perfect example of what we can do with your tremendous support.
