RYDERS TV

What You Should Know About Color TV

The Ontario Government has recently published a green paper on Consumer Product Warranties. It is expected that a new Act of Parliament will replace an obsolete Sale of Goods Act. Hopefully this new Act will clear up a few misconceptions regarding warranties, and the green paper is available for reference in our store. Warranties, whether adequate or more than adequate are obviously useless unless someone carries out the work involved. Our concern is about the many requests we receive to do warranty work, on items we are NOT obligated to service. We are the service depot in this area for Motorola, Magnavox and Hitachi. As such we are obligated to carry out warranty repairs to these products, wherever they come from. We also will normally do warranty repairs on all products we sell, or if necessary we will fall back on the service depots for these products. For example we will often use the service depot for Sansui or Garrard in Toronto in handling warranty repairs on these items. If however, we did not sell the product, and we naturally cannot become involved. For better consumer protection we hope the new Act will make it mandatory to state at the time of sale who is obligated to carry out warranty repairs.
