

INTERIOR OF GEORGETOWN FABRICS STORE

Moore Park Is Location For Georgetown Fabrics

A new business in Georgetown specializes in textiles, and proprietor Mrs. Donna Robin says it pays to sew your own clothes.

It's her first business operation, and she comes to it with the experience of a home economics teacher.

Now in her store she carries 68 types of fabrics, in amounts that she calculates will best serve the Georgetown market. Fine selection, quality and reasonable prices are offered.

And she provides special consideration for young people in school sewing classes and for night school students, studying sewing. They can talk to Mrs. Robin about their sewing needs, and prices.

Sewing pays off in reduced clothing costs, Mrs. Robin says, and she creates her own clothes to prove her point. Through her store she offers a line of patterns and sewing accessories.

Mrs. Robin offers knowledgeable, conscientious service about textiles and their application and can draw on her own experiences to provide the best advice. She was close to the trade scene in Montreal and customers will find they can benefit from her advice and help.

Shock Film Is Discussed

AOTS men's club of St. John's United Church of Georgetown and Glen Williams held its first meeting of the season on Tuesday, Oct. 2. Dinner was followed by a business session and a film entitled And Then They Forgot God.

A couple in a brave new world type of situation discovers when they lose their monthly food ticket that they can starve even though the system says it is impossible. As a last resort they turn to God and phone the department of religious affairs where the computerized answering service breaks down. The final scenes depict the man receiving his food ticket the following month from a clerk who asks his how he managed for the past month without food and, "Oh by the way, what happened to your arm?" as she sees his left arm is missing.

In spite of the macabre theme of the film a lively discussion ensued and this concluded the evening's program.

Now Say GO Goes Early '74

FROM TORONTO BUREAU OF THE HERALD

Transportation and Communications Minister Gordon Carton said this week he expects GO Train service from Union Station in Toronto to Georgetown will begin in January or February of next year. Earlier in the week, a delay in commencement of the service was reported due to shut-downs at plants manufacturing the rolling stock for GO Transit. Mr. Carton said the work stoppage was the only reason for the revised plans. He discounted reports that GO engineers were concerned with noise abatement along the line and needed more time to solve the problem.

"We won't know the extent of the noise until we get going," said the minister. "There may not be any problem at all."

Notice of Public Meetings Bradley-Georgetown Transmission Line Routes

The Study Continues

Ontario Hydro has been conducting an intensive study over the past few months on the location of the transmission line routes between the Bruce Station and the Kitchener-Georgetown areas.

The purpose of the study is to find the best possible location within the 3,000 square mile study area for two 500,000 volt transmission line rights-of-way to transmit electricity generated at the Bruce Generating Station to the Georgetown area and a new transformer station near Kitchener.

The First Phase

The first phase of the study was devoted to assembling basic data about the study area from maps, statistics, etc., in order to establish possible corridors for the transmission lines.

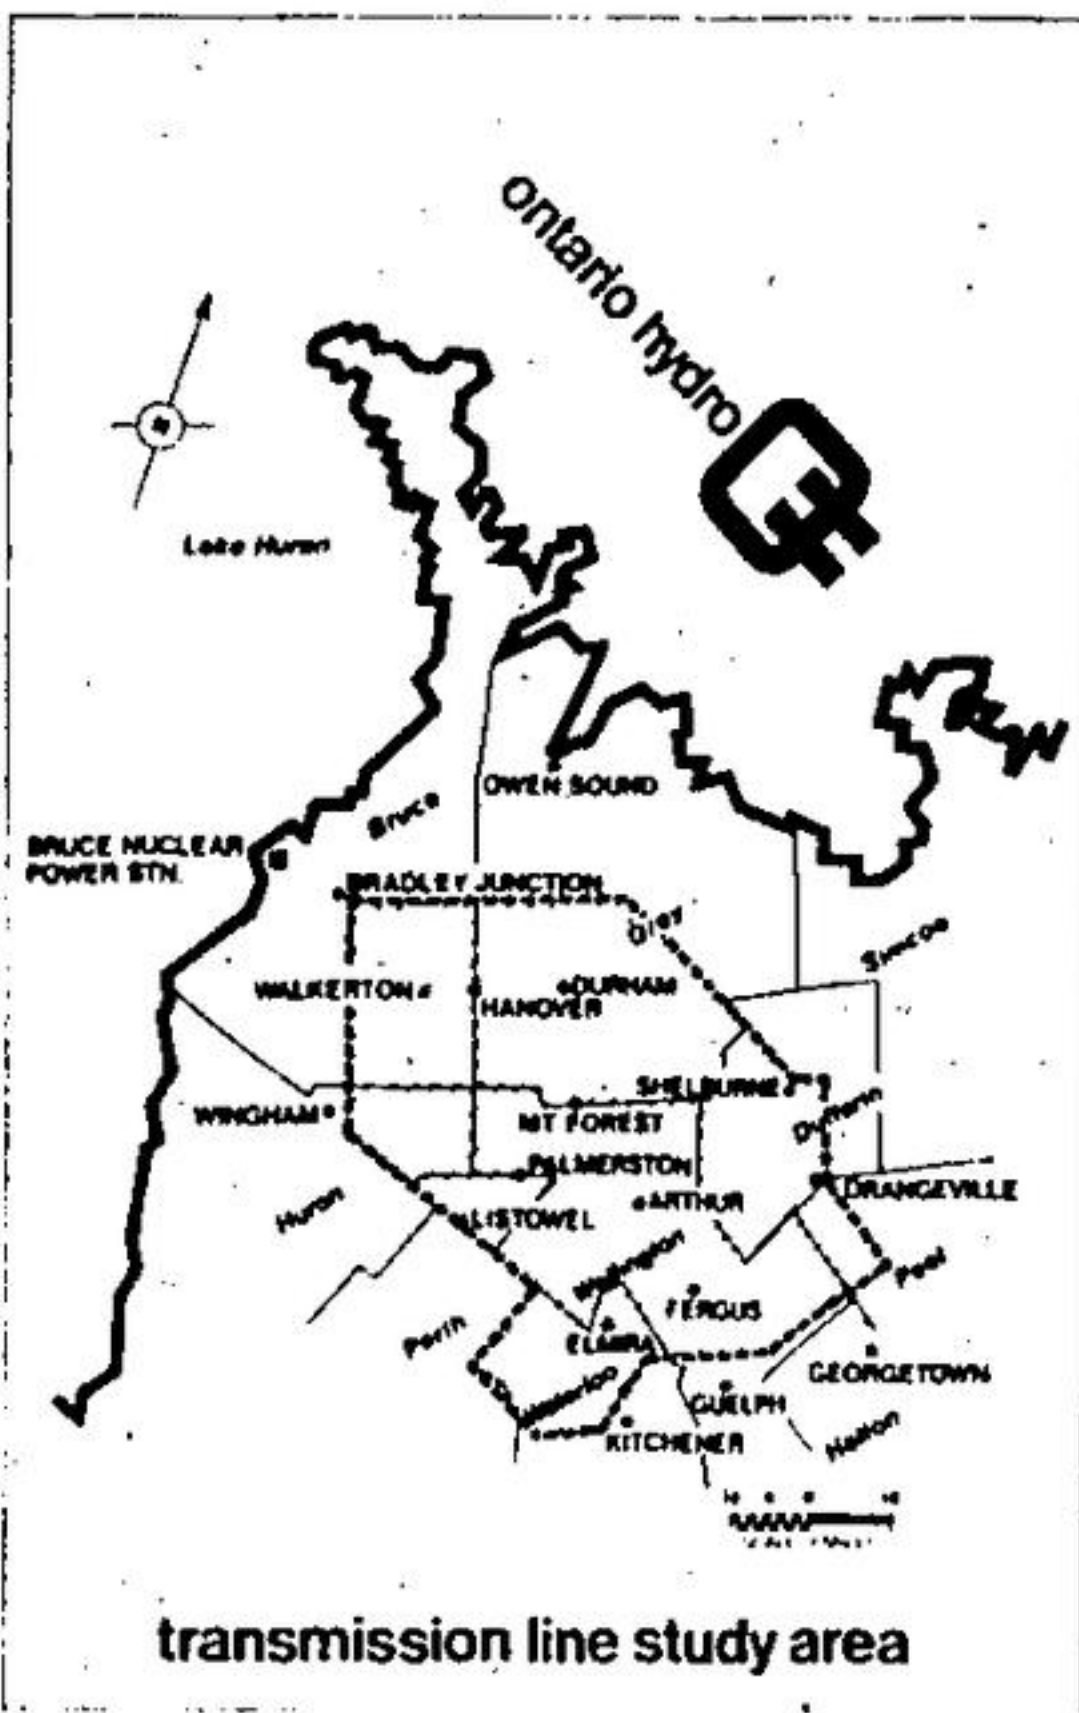

During March and April 1973, public meetings and opinion surveys were conducted across the study area. Since that time the project team has been working to establish possible alternative corridors.

Now The Second Phase

To determine the views of the community about these corridors, a second phase of public meetings has been arranged. These are listed below.

There is a meeting for your area and you are invited to attend.

A large scale map showing the location and details of the alternative corridors will be on display from 7:00 p.m. on the evening of the meeting. Hydro representatives will also be available at that time to discuss the corridors with you.
