INSIGHTS

Winter Carnival

The Winter Carnival is coming! Once again, the grade 13 students are following GDHS's Winter carnival tradition. This year's highlights will be very much like last year's, which means another fun and exciting week of dances, beauty pageants, car rallies and general light heartedness. It will also give students a lift after eight days of exams and classes.

The Winter Carnival will be kicked off this year, as in past years, with the Saturday morning pancake breakfast from 8:00 a.m. to noon. By the time the bearburn has worn off, it will be evening and time for the Snow Queen pageant, with Georgetown High's 10 best beauties and perhaps another surprise before judgement time. (We all remember last year's fashion parade—starring the senior Rebels football team). Sunday is the day for the car rally and the master plan has it ending in plenty of time to tow your cars home in time for dinner.

A permanent schedule for evening activities has not yet been announced, but it will include such goodies as a movie (preferably something rated X), a thrilling euchre tournament, and the judging of snow sculptures. This brings us to variety, an accumulative effort by the many fools who have spent half a year trying to top each other with the best jokes. That means you, Stats. Everyone is expected to pitch in with a least one well-placed chuckle. The Winter Carnival chairman is even passing out nickels at the end of the programme to all good laughers, but of course this won't be necessary. By the end of the Variety night, the grade 13 students will probably be so exhausted that there will only be one optimistic thought left, that all those snickering grade 12's will go through this next year. But the carnival isn't over yet.

The Mardi Gras has still to come, complete with costumes, good cheers and Crowbar, the renowned band, to play at the dance. Naturally, we expect another gang war during the dance and perhaps they will even look more human (and less rabbit) this year. But who knows?

A message to the few of you who survive this year's carnival—since it's obvious you missed most of the carnival, you can sit down and read all about it in the High School Insights (that is, of course, if we survive.)

DANCE

January's dance will be next week on Friday, Jan. 25 starting at 8:30 p.m. and ending at 11:30 p.m. At press time the group to be providing the music had not been chosen.

EXAMS

Exams at GDHS are to be held from Wednesday, January 16 until Friday, January 25. The exams will be held during the morning and a half school day will be held in the afternoon. Conflicts in scheduling have been resolved and all should run well (as far as the schedule goes). After the exams the second semester will begin.

STUDENTS EYE VIEW

As the mercury drops outside, strange things are happening inside GDHS. Between studying for exams, trying to figure out how one goes about bribing a teacher, and battling the winter weather, the average student is going crazy. About exams no more need be said since most of us have gone through similar crises at least once.

It is the cold that requires discussion. Three rings have fallen from frigid fingers over the period of a single week and a few small foreign cars have disappeared or been covered over in the student and teacher parking lots. (Rumour has it that an English teacher has been buried along with his orange Volkswagon.)

Even teachers are having a bad time. Students are complaining about frost filled classrooms, too much homework and having to pay bribes by cash. Oh where is summer?

Trinity Teachers Plan April Recital

The 17th meeting of the Georgetown Trinity Teachers' Association was held Jan. 6 at the home of honorary president, Mrs. D. R. Scull.

Faye Pink moved that the minutes of the last meeting be adopted as read. The motion was seconded by Judi Petherick. It was decided that during the next months the association will concentrate on a study of Beethoven.

GOOD REASONS TO INVEST IN A POWER HUMIDIFIER

1. A power humidifier will supply automatically all the moisture your home needs to give a comfortable atmosphere without "dried-out" air.
2. A properly humidified home will help save you money on your fuel bills—you'll be helping conserve energy, too. A power humidifier can be profitable to you.
3. The wrong humidity can cause your furniture to crack and pull apart, and drapes and carpets to become brittle. A power humidifier will help you avoid these costly problems in your home.
4. You'll find all the expert advice you need on power humidifiers at your BEAVER store. Come and see us, today!
