

Beware Babies' Blocked Breathing

Babies and toddlers try to get their hands on everything in sight. And what gets into their hands often goes into their mouths or even up the nose. From there, an object can get lodged in their lungs. And that means trouble.

A pea or peanut or marble can be small enough to go up the nose and almost anything can get into the mouth and be "swallowed the wrong way." Instead of going down the throat and into the stomach, the object can go down the windpipe and into the air passages of the lungs. A breathing passage can be damaged permanently unless the object is removed quickly.

A foreign body can cause trouble, but so can other situations. The blocking of an air passage can happen as an aftermath of a pneumonia that complicated measles whooping cough, or influenza. If a baby or young child has TB, a similar blocking can occur.

Blocking an air passage, combined with an infection, can cause a disease called bronchiectasis. The combination damages the structures that sweep out dirt and germs from the lungs — the cilia. Cilia sweep in an upward motion that forces particles toward the mouth, where they are swallowed and then sent back to the stomach. When the cilia are weakened, mucus and particles build up in the air passages, and a cough results. The cough is an attempt to dislodge the build-up.

For more information about all kinds of lung diseases, contact your TB and RD Association at 184 Balsam Drive, Oakville. And as you live and breathe, give more to Christmas Seals. They fight lung diseases.

NEW LIBRARY PLANS

One of the plans which are posted in the library, outlining the proposed expansion of the building. The addition will highlight the existing building by using pre-cast concrete on the outside. The architect is Paul Martel of Toronto.

New Cruiser

Acton OPP have received a new cruiser, bringing the local fleet up to two. Corp. Robert Arbour said the new addition has been discussed for some time. The extra unit, he said, will allow constant patrols of regular trouble spots, and more frequent use of the radar unit to trap speeders.

Police recovered a 1965 Buick which had been stolen from the front of 87 Main Street. Robert J. McHugh was found in the auto and charged with car theft.

CENTURY HOME—Impressive century centre hall plan, two storey home, built in 1880 on almost one acre of manicured lawns, shrubs, and trees. Five large bedrooms, plus an extra room with rear staircase.
