

Justice Necessary For Lasting Peace

The February meeting of St. John's United Church of Georgetown and Glen Williams A.O.S. Men's Club heard Dr. William Eckhardt of the Canadian Peace Research Institute speak on the topic "What makes people behave aggressively?"

Dr. Eckhardt presented four theories which try to explain man's aggressive nature, with aggression in this instance being defined as activity which hurts people in some way.

The Instinct theory suggests that we are aggressive by nature. There must be a distinction made between aggression and the capability of aggression and research has shown that aggression is not really a basic drive like hunger or sex. It is hard to define a need for aggression other than a pathological one.

The Frustration theory maintains that we feel aggressive when things do not go the way we want or when we see other people frustrated by some situation. A prime example of frustration is the Middle East where the Arabs were frustrated by western nations. When the state of Israel was created, the Israelis were the object of frustration-created aggressiveness.

The reward theory is based on the idea that aggressive behavior is reinforced when attention is lavished on that aggression or when other psychological or physical benefits result.

The conformity theory suggests that people do what they believe is their duty. Examples of this type of aggression were recorded at the Nuremberg trials where officers maintained they were carrying out orders from higher up.

In a question and answer period, Dr. Eckhardt went on to enlarge on these theories. He firmly believes that justice is a necessary basis for lasting peace and that the teachings of Jesus Christ are also fundamental in that we must care for others as we would care for ourselves.

One of the areas of peace research is the attempt to understand how to create situations where everyone can win and no one loses. This is a rather important goal but one which is difficult to achieve.

An area where peace research groups have had very little success is in predicting when and where conflicts will break out. The main reason for their difficulty is the complex nature of interpersonal relationships.

The Canadian Peace Research Institute was founded in 1961 by Norman Atcock as a non-profit institution to engage in research into the causes and prevention of war. By conducting surveys and interviews, studying United Nations voting patterns, and conducting international simulation and statistical analysis they have been able to show that:

— most top leaders (business, labor, and political) are much less belligerent than the average citizen.

— territorial boundaries and power are key concepts in the causes of war.

— economic causes accounted for less than a third of all wars over the last 150 years.

— differing beliefs (national, political, class, or religious) are more important than language or race.

Comparing the budget and size of the staff with the amount of information gathered and disseminated by the Canadian Peace Research Institute, it is amazing what this Oakville-based organization has accomplished in the last 13 years.

Natural Gas New Record

Union Gas Limited has established a new record in the amount of natural gas distributed to customers through the Company's south-western Ontario distribution network.

Company statistics announced today indicate that on Dec. 17, 1973, a record 1,087,533,000 cubic feet of natural gas was delivered to Union's more than 375,000 customers, including deliveries to the Kitchener Public Utilities Commission.

The previous high was set Feb. 16, 1973, when 1,035,810,000 cubic feet of gas were delivered—the first time the billion-cubic-foot mark had been reached. Calculations for these record amounts do not include gas transported through company lines for TransCanada Pipelines Limited and other gas companies. When these amounts are added, totals reach nearly two billion cubic feet.

Start using the Government's own rules to save a bundle on income tax. Deadline March 1st.

Here's a perfectly legal way to use the Government's own rules to save on your income tax.

The Government has a law that says, in effect: "If you save now for your retirement, you can deposit as much as $4,000 into a registered retirement savings plan every year, and we'll let you knock it off your income."

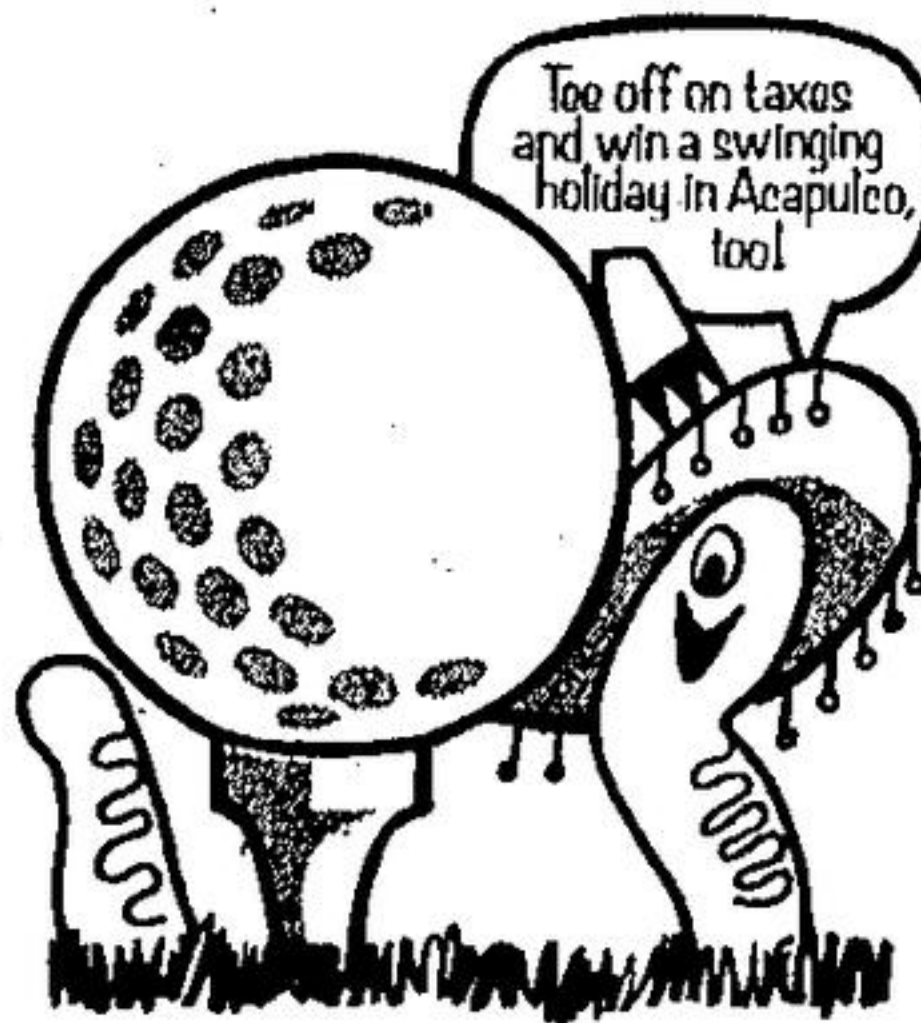

Once again this year, you can deposit up to 20% of your earned income into a Canada Trust Registered Retirement Savings Plan, and then deduct that amount from your taxable income. If you already participate in a pension plan where you work, the maximum amount deductible using both plans is $2,500. Registered Retirement Savings Plans can be especially advantageous for families where husband and wife are both wage earners.

Check how you can tee off on taxes, while saving retirement dollars.

Annual Earned Income	Maximum Allowable Contribution	Your Tax Saving	Tax Savings as a % of Contribution
$ 5,000	$1,000	$ 196	20%
7,500	1,500	403	27
10,000	2,000	585	30
15,000	3,000	1,032	34
20,000	4,000	1,677	42
30,000	4,000	1,877	47

These figures are based on 1973 income tax rates for a self-employed taxpayer claiming the full marital exemption with two children, eligible for family allowance; the assumed provincial tax rate is 30.5%; tax savings could vary slightly depending on your province of residence.

To top it all off, the money you save can make more money. Essentially there are four ways. You can have us invest it in stocks, in bonds and mortgages, or at a guaranteed rate of interest. Or divide your money up using any combination of these three alternatives.

Too off on taxes and win a swinging holiday in Acapulco, too!

The beauty of it is... you can actually control the combination as your needs change over the years. And you're under no obligation to make future deposits of any size. You decide how much and how often you want to make your deposits. Some other plans require you to sign a contract that specifies a minimum annual contribution.

You can even get your money out without paying a penalty.

When you eventually choose to withdraw it, you have to pay taxes on it at that time, of course. But this is what's most important. You pay tax on your money when you decide to pay it. This means later, when you're likely in a lower tax bracket.

Moreover, we don't have a lot of salesmen out making calls, so you don't pay sales commissions.

This means, however, that you have to call us. Don't put it off. You can't deduct any deposits from your 1973 income after Friday, March 1st, 1974.

No Red Tape
There's no red tape to start a Canada Trust Registered Retirement Savings Plan... just a simple application.

Win a 'Swinging' Holiday for Two in Sunny Acapulco

$1,000 Cash Bonus

Saving for retirement can be a very rewarding experience. Make the tax rules work for you. Call or come in today. Remember the deadline.
