

Children's Aid Society seeks new members

President George Heym, of the Children's Aid Society of Halton, says the Society is trying hard to enlarge its membership.

"We would like to involve every person in the community if that were possible. In particular, we hope to attract new people who see the needs for community resources. They could be people who need them for themselves or they could be professionals who are aware, through their work, of what we are lacking."

The Children's Aid president says he has heard of single mothers who desperately want to get off public assistance but who need child care help to take a job or retraining.

"We know of families who need psychiatric service for the mother or the father but there is none to be had in the small community where they live. We need clinics for treatment and also for assessment of children, available to all of Halton."

"We want these things in our communities - not in some far away city where a person has to leave home to get help."

The Society believes that these services will not come about unless there is a public demand for them. Executive Director, Dr. Gordon Askwith, says he hopes that the Society can mobilize the community to bring the Region of Halton into line with more advanced communities in Ontario.

Membership entitles the holder to vote at the Annual Meeting for the Board of Directors and on important questions arising at the meeting. Members are also entitled to nominate and to be nominated to the Board. The cost is $4 per year. For information call 878-2375.

If you're making use of the GO trains to Georgetown consider yourself one of 2,500. GO officials report that patronage on the northwest train to Georgetown has climbed from 1,500 people a day in the first few weeks to more than 2,500 a day now. The equipment can handle over 2,800 per day.

Good work in camera

Halton Hills Mayor Tom Hill said Thursday's meeting between the town's department heads and council, held in camera, was very "fruitful." Mayor Hill added that no information pertaining to the meeting was officially released yet, but "we got a lot of work done."

"If we don't start to get the stuff done now, we won't be doing anything," he added. The meeting began at 1 p.m. and went past 7 p.m.

Help is coming for teenagers

The services of the contact centre's telephone service are not restricted to youth.

Many elderly and lonely people call just for company. Alcoholics and wives of alcoholics call for guidance. Young couples and divorced women with small children seek help in finding accommodation they can afford.

Preteens often call because they can't discuss certain things with their parents. It doesn't even have to be a family or an intimate problem. The centre works closely with the YMCA babysitter's course to provide sitters for desperate couples.

VARIETY IN CALLS

A telephone volunteer says "there's no end to the variety of calls we receive. Some days we get no calls, other days the phone is ringing off the hook."

The volunteering nurses, teachers, housewives, executives, and ministers work in four shifts all day every day. The night shift is eight hours. They are always there to lend an ear to those in need and point them in the right direction.

They work in co-operation with all community services and will refer the caller to a family counsellor, social worker, psychiatrist, lawyer, minister or the Children's Aid. But the most important advantage of the anonymous telephone service is to the person who is suspicious of professionals and prefers to develop a rapport with an ordinary down-to-earth individual like themselves.

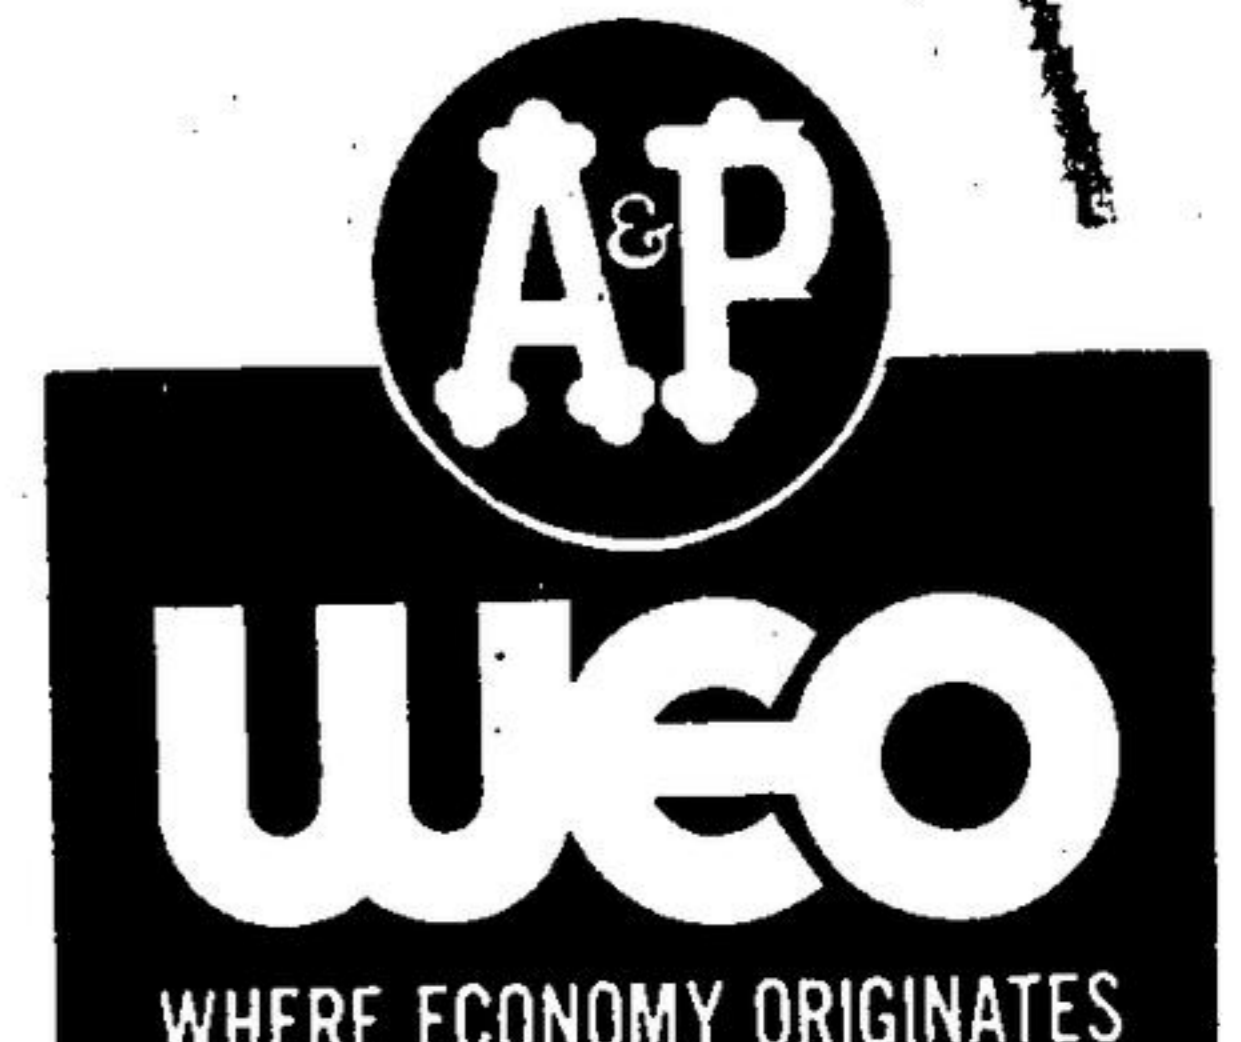

The Contact Centre needs more volunteers. For anyone interested in this worthwhile work, there is a 20 hour training course beginning this weekend in the Knox Presbyterian Church, Georgetown. The course which runs for two weekends begins Friday, November 1 at 7:30 p.m., and continues through Saturday the 8th from 9 till 4 p.m., and again on the 8th and 9th.

The courses will be conducted by various speakers representing several community services.
