

THE DELICATE CRAFT of needlepoint was presented by Marlon Juniper and Glenda Barton of Georgetown.

Saddles to boots to trains:

Hobbyists from Georgetown, Acton, Milton and Toronto filled Holy Cross Auditorium last Saturday afternoon for the first hobby and craft show, sponsored by Georgetown Hobbies and Crafts.

Twenty-one displays, ranging from model railroading to decoupage, drew a large crowd of hobby and craft-minded people to the special showing.

Jim Langedyk, organizer and sponsor of the event, along with his wife Lida and family, have been planning the event since January. Friends, customers and relatives turned out to share their talents and interests with the people of Georgetown.

Model displays of the Radio Control Model Plane Club, radio controlled boats and railroads attracted many children while displays of weaving tapestry and ceramics caught the attention of the adults visiting the show.

Several train layouts dominated the stage of the auditorium, set up by the Georgetown Model Railroad Club which meets at the hobby store.

Leather working was one of the new hobbies that Mr. Langedyk has introduced to the area through his store. The display, featured a miniature saddle, hand-tooled by Mr. Langedyk.

According to Lida Langedyk, there may be a second show in the fall.

"The turnout was just fantastic," she said "It was a most enjoyable afternoon, meeting with people interested in the same hobbies as you are."

they were all there

DOLLS MADE OF BLEACH bottles from Hillsburgh by Alice Boyd.

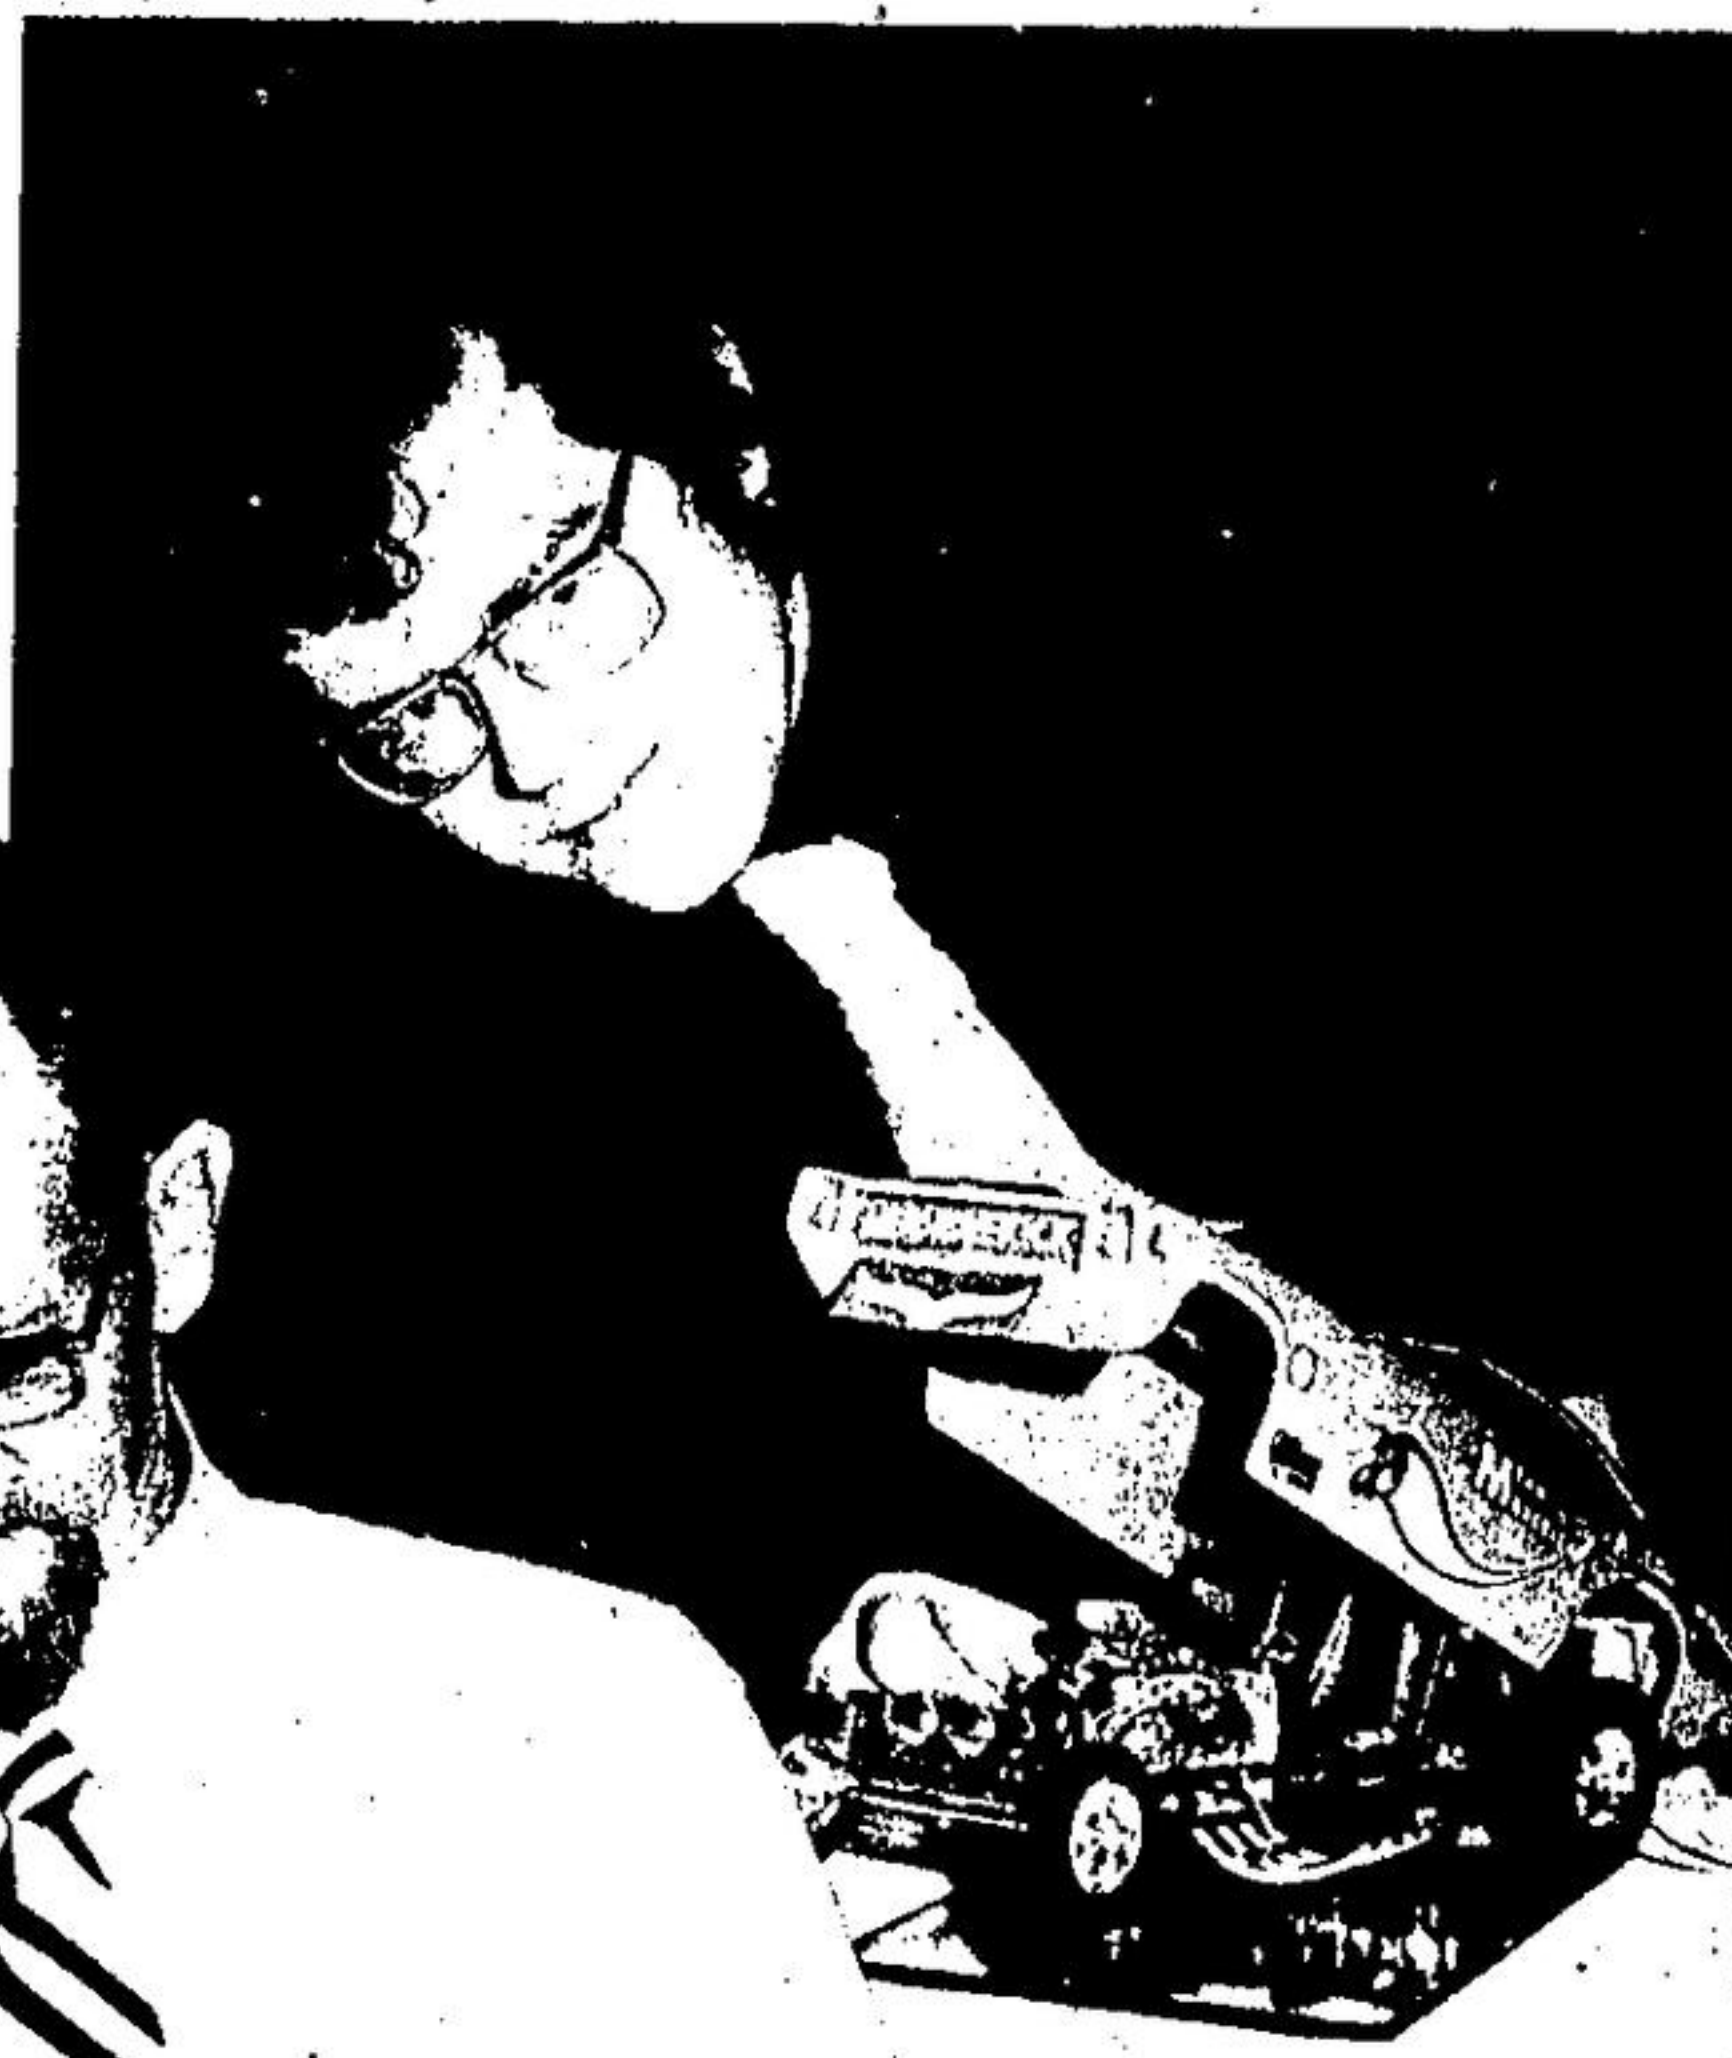

LEILA ANDERSON AND MARION MONTGOMERY, armed with sandpaper, and cutouts prepare to demonstrate the art of decoupage for the many that attended the show.

JULIE HARLOW owner and operator of Julie's Ceramics prepared a large showing of many ceramic pieces for those attending the Hobby and Crafts Show.

the HERALD

DON COTTLE displays a few of the many models he has done over the last few years.

JIM LANGEDYK proudly displays a miniature saddle he personally handcrafted for the show.

JIM COLTER puts the finishing touches on the model railroad display that attracted the attention of many children and adults who visited the first hobby show for this area.

photos by richard forster