Tinker Bell splash

Swimming is something we all take for granted. Splashing around in the water is cool, refreshing and fun but to the children attending the Tinker Bell Nursery School for the Mentally Retarded it is an exercise in co-ordination, cooperation, awareness and of course a time to splash the instructors.

SPLASH AND LAUGH. That is just a couple of reasons why the swim program of Tinker Bell Nursery School for the mentally retarded is so important. Volunteers assist with the children who visit the Credit Valley Club free of charge each Friday.

Each Friday morning 12 to 18 children who attend the nursery school in Milton are taken by bus to the Credit Valley Club in Norval where pool facilities are provided free of charge to the school which is run under the North Halton Association for the Mentally Retarded.

Don Blackmore, president of the Newfoundland Club, owners of the Credit Valley Club adjusts the water temperature of the pool for maximum comfort of the children participating in the program.

"Through organizations such as these we are able to operate successfully in opening such a wide variety of experiences for our children," explained chairman Edith Hillman of the school.

Parents are charged a minimal fee to defray the operational costs of the experimental education programs conducted by the school in their new quarters, the E. C. Drury School, formerly the Ontario School for the Deaf.

Part of the residence of the school has been converted to class rooms for the nursery, providing facilities that would be required for children of the two to five year age bracket.

Volunteers assist with the implementation of the program that serves to provide basic training to the many area children attending with a special emphasis on individual learning situations with personal instructors to aid in the process.

Each child works through a planned program designed by Director Jenny Kuiken to meet the perceptual and learning problems of each particular child. With each student having their own volunteer more volunteers are required. Rachel Clifford, Fran Fenton, Mary Carey, Helen Hills, Louise Arts, Sue Evans, Linda Tarras, Jenny Kuiken, Mary Lamen, Marg Gibson and Maxine Hearst already take children to the pool each Friday but anyone with one morning a week to spare and who doesn't mind a refreshing swim and a little gratification for a job that is helping one less fortunate than yourself call to either Edith Hillman at 853-2588 or Jenny Kuiken at 853-7856.

Preliminary plans for Glen cemetery

The water management advisory board of the Credit Valley Conservation Authority held a meeting earlier in September to hear preliminary plans on the Glen Williams Cemetery.

Mr. J. Nixon of Kilborn Engineering Ltd. presented to the board, a summary of the preliminary engineering study for the cemetery. In his report Mr. Nixon referred to two priorities of the study; those of erosion control and of stabilization of the embankment.

Revealed in the summary were the estimated costs of the two top priorities. Erosion control of the river in the area would cost approximately $36,450 and stabilization of the embankment by the construction of a berm and the construction of a swall for run off in the ditch or half of the culvert plus cut, fill and regrading was estimated at $51,850. Total cost for the project would run somewhere in the $88,300 area.

The Credit Valley Conservation Authority decided to receive the draft of the preliminary engineering report however the authority will discuss other alternatives, for the final presentation, with other consultants and members of the CVCA staff.

A GROUP OF GRADE SEVEN GIRLS competing in Centennial Public School's annual cross country meet, show the strain of the run. More than 800 students, male and female, from grades six, seven and eight took part in the meet.
