Loses ten sheep

The latest example of sheep losses due to wolves was reported to Halton Hills council last week. Liberto Franchino, whose farm is located on the Sixth Line will receive compensation from the town for the loss of 10 sheep in wolf attacks last month. The total damage amounted to $385 in the attacks. The town, in turn, will be compensated by the ministry of natural resources.

the Crown is the font of all honor, all coats of arms must stem from the Crown."

Halton Hills' coat of arms was registered in June with the Lyon King of Arms in Scotland. Of the two authorities with the power to grant a coat of arms—the College of Arms in England and the Scottish Lyon King of Arms—the town chose the latter because many of the earliest settlers here came from Scotland.

Mr. Macpherson praised Miss Stone's design commenting that he felt that the original design was a touch better than that which the artists of the Lyon King of Arms had shown in the Letters Patent, the official description of the arms.

He then read the Letters Patent which in heraldic terms carefully describes the unique features of the Halton Hills crest. It shows a bullet-shaped shield with the motto printed on a scroll underneath and the whole topped with a wall-shaped crown.

The shield's design shows a tall pine tree in the centre with five branches representing the area's oldest municipality Esqueping.

Through the top quarter of the shield there is a line separating a jagged band of blue and silver which represents the Niagara Escarpment. Below it on both sides of the pine tree are black and blue wavy lines forming a V from the base of the tree to the corners of the escarpment. The wavy lines represent the Silver and Black Creeks which pass through the area's rural and urban areas, and therefore unites them into a unit.

The two separated sections in the body of the shield represent the two main urban areas of the municipality, Acton and Georgetown.

Reverend L. Ewing of St. Alban's Church in Acton dedicated the coat of arms.

Also present were Regional Chairman Allan Masson, Milton Mayor Anne MacArthur and MPP Julian Reed. A letter from Premier Bill Davis stated that he regretted not being able to attend the unveiling.

"It's nice to know that a senior citizen can still make a worthwhile contribution," cheerfully concluded Miss Stone.
