Into the hot seat

Halton Hills regional councillor Dick Howitt jumped from a mere member of Halton council to the hot seat last Wednesday, and it was all totally unexpected.

Councillors rotate chairmanship of the committee of the whole every month and this month is Burlington Mayor George Harrington's turn to be in charge. But one item of the public works committee's report did not sit well with Mayor Harrington so, to get an opportunity to legally speak on the item, he passed the chairman's gavel over to Oakville councillor Mac Anderson.

Anderson also wanted to say something about the item, so he passed the gavel on to the next man beside him, councillor Howitt, the newest member of regional council. After an in camera session in which the matter was thoroughly discussed Councillor Howitt relinquished control of the meeting back to Mayor Harrington.

Replace destroyed club if...

Random Car Club can rebuild

The Random Car Club, forced out of their old Glen Williams club garage when fire destroyed it two months ago, have been given tentative approval by the Credit Valley Conservation Authority to rebuild.

After meeting with representatives of the car club, Grant Somers, Ross Dryden and Dave Puckering, the CVCA's executive last Thursday evening decided that the club could construct a building, but it could not exceed the size of the original building put up by the club in 1974. That building was also destroyed by fire.

That original size stipulation will place a damper on the club's current reconstruction plans. They had definite plans to put up a building 1,710 square feet larger than the building which recently burned.

Mr. Puckering, representing Fairford Industries, the suppliers of the 22-stage steel building, explained that the building would be fireproof and could be built on the existing concrete pad.

Chairman of the CVCA, Grant Clarkson, expressed some doubt as to whether or not a new building could be constructed below the Credit River's flood plain level but committee member Hazel McCallion pointed out that regulations permit the replacement of a building destroyed by fire but only a building the same size as that which was originally permitted by the authority.

The authority's solicitors will review the Random Car Club's request before final approval for construction is granted.

Building passes $13M mark in October

Building in Halton Hills has passed the $13 million mark this far this year. Building permit statistics for the month of October show total building in the town to the end of October totalling $13,296,632 on 716 different projects.

Single family homes built under plans of subdivisions led the October list of permits. Eight new homes were started with a total value of $240,000.

Five other homes were given building permits. Their total value was $229,000.

A booming business in alterations accounted for 18 projects with a total value of $37,550. Two industrial permits were granted for a total of $160,000.

The total construction in October amounted to 58 projects valued at $897,819. To date this year the totals in the various categories include: single family units under plans of subdivisions, $4,019,039; other single family homes, $2,795,500; other residential dwellings, $1,516,120; alterations, $590,210; new commercial, $1,121,600; new industrial, $1,312,351; institutional, $746,175; agricultural, $200,761.

Family court staff ready to move

When the family court offices at 107 Main Street South relocate in the provincial court building in Milton, they will be able to offer increased service to those requiring assistance from family court. The move is scheduled to take place November 21 with the Milton office opening on Monday the 24th.

Georgetown residents will no longer have the convenience of walking to the court offices as they have in the past. The office serves as the central office for the entire county which forced out-of-town residents to make the journey there. Now the tables have turned as the Georgetown people will be making the short trip to the Steeles Avenue court house.

With the office located in the court building, family court will be able to provide probation and counselling services at their office during regular business hours.

The Children's Aid Society have been allotted a room in the family court offices to compliment the services needed in Halton.

"Once we have set everything up in our new offices we will operate five days a week rather than the present four," explained court administrator Frederick Baugh.

The counselling and referral service offered by the court will be available only at the Steeles Avenue location, together with the court payments, either made or collected.

Georgetown's Justices of the Peace, Bea Clark and Paul Armstrong will still handle the domestic disputes in which charges must be laid in the case of deserted wives, etc. That is the only service offered by the court that will still be available in town.

Marriages will be conducted at the Milton family court offices on the first floor of the court house building by Judge A. James Fuller.

The staff—Lorna Taylor, Leena Thompson, Kay Dwyer, Doreen Lince, June Beene and Frederick Baugh—will be at the Milton office, beginning November 24.

Court administrator and Justice of the Peace Frederick Baugh and his staff are enthusiastic about the move and the upgrading of family services it will foster. The only real concern about the move is the fact there is no transportation system in the region that focuses on Milton.

Milton is the county seat where court, agricultural and other county services are located, but there is no bus service to the growing town from the larger centres in Halton that must look to the town for county services.

The court offices will offer increased parking but in many cases the people using family court no longer have access to cars.

Okay to finish garage after 14 years

An application by H. Deforest of Terra Cotta to complete construction of a garage begun in 1961 and recently stopped by the Credit Valley Conservation Authority has been approved by the CVCA's Executive.

Mr. Deforest was on hand for the CVCA's meeting Thursday night in Meadowvale. He explained that, because of difficulties during the early stages of the building's construction, all work had stopped only to begin this past year. The building was nearing completion when a stop work order was placed on the building by CVCA staff.

The executives concluded that the original 1961 permit, because the foundations had been put in, still was in effect and completion of the concrete block must now be granted. The building is to be a 16-foot high structure to be used in conjunction with Mr. Deforest's quarry operations.

Many local Royal Winter Fair entries

A number of area residents have registered in various phases of competitions to be held at the Royal Winter Fair November 14 to the 28.

Brian Walters and Lynda Pabat of Terra Cotta have jointly registered in the breeding horse class of the competitions. Other entries in the same class are: Mr. and Mrs. R. Hill of R.R. 1 Terra Cotta; Mr. and Mrs. Rick Wilcox, Penn-Y-Lane Farm, 5th Sideroad, Georgetown, Mari-Louise Woolver, R.R. 1 Hornby, Cathy Dillon, RRS Georgetown and Lisa Woods, RRS Georgetown.

Entries in the horse show class are: Jennifer Monroe, care of Sam-Son Farms of Hornby and also from the same farm and in the same class are competitors: Kim Merrill, Lisa Naylor, Lisa Denn and Patricia Burke.

Sam-Son Farms are also entering in the breeding and horse show classes. Sue Franklin from the Halton School of Equitation is competing in the horse show as well as Mr. and Mrs. Don Health of Hornby. Penn-Y-Lane Farm will also be entering in the horse show.

Frank Anthony of RRI Limehouse will be entering the field crops category in the fair.

The Royal Winter Fair will be held in the CNE grounds from Nov. 14 through to the 28.

Seven new Norval Brownies

By Dorothy McLean

Seven Brownies were enrolled into the Norval Brownie Pack on Monday evening, Nov. 3 at a special ceremony held in the Presbyterian Church with Brown Owl Dianne Taylor conducting the ceremony.

The girls who were enrolled were: Janet Annable, Tracey Bell, Catherine Cassalman, Laura Graskroth, Debbie Sibbald, Lynne Taylor, and Karen Terashita.

Commissioner Barbara Neuman and mothers along with a few fathers and friends of the girls were present for the special enrolment.

Badges were also presented to many of the brownies. Some of the badges were earned at camp during the summer and others the girls have been working on at home. Many items made by the girls to get their badges were on display which included items made from plastic bottles, bead work, and various toys.

Lunch was served by the seven girls who were enrolled and parents and friends enjoyed viewing the work done by the Brownies.

Michelle Albany, Food City Consumer Consultant, was the guests speaker at the November meeting of Norval Women's Institute meeting held on Thursday evening, November 6 at the home of Mrs. Jean Harrop with Mrs. Ina Terry presiding in the absence of the president, Mrs. Amy Burk.

Ms. Albany gave an interesting talk on how to shop wisely, the new metric system soon to be used on all packaging, and the new computer code being introduced into some supermarkets in place of the present cashier system. According to Ms. Albany these computers will be an advantage to the shopper and give more information than the present cash register tapes.

The roll call was answered with "Name a Canadian Product". Mrs. Jean May and Mrs. Ina Terry, Family and Consumer Affairs conveners, were in charge of the program. Mrs. Carrie Graham was secretary in the absence of Mrs. Kathy Chester.

Mrs. Ina Terry gave a report of the recent District Directors' meeting.

It was decided to send $10 for Christmas to our adopted little girl in Hong Kong.

The hostess was assisted by Mrs. Ethel Webb in serving lunch and a social time was enjoyed.

Twenty-four people from the Huttonville-Norval United Church charge enjoyed an inspirational day at Cedar Glen, Toronto Camp and Conference Centre, near Bolton, on Sunday, November 9 from 3 to 9 p.m.

Rev. Bill Lord, Congregational Consultant of the Toronto Conference, left in afternoon and evening discussion on faith and subjects of concern to Christian life today. He kept the discussions lively and interesting.

A hot dinner and fellowship was enjoyed from 5.30 to 7 followed by another discussion period.

The discussions and dinner were held around the large fireplace in the main lodge at Cedar Glen.

Things start to click for Camera Club

The Halton Hills Camera Club may finally get down to doing some serious photography, thanks to the town's recreation department which has permitted the club to establish a permanent darkroom in Cedarvale.

Membership in the club has dwindled due to the lack of facilities available to the members. Meetings were held in the high school and at the homes of the members, but without a darkroom, it was difficult to establish any type of useful instruction or practical seminars.

The few remaining members are hopeful that this latest move will get the club re-established and functioning within the town.

The remaining problem is outfitting the room for quality production in both black and white and color. The members plan to start work on the room as soon as possible to make it light tight and, with the loaning of personal equipment by the members the room should be ready for operation within the next few weeks.

The next project for the club is to raise funds to buy equipment. Ideas for the club discussed at the November meeting included a 50-50 draw, draw with a family portrait as prize and the sale of photographic products.
