HUGH GRAHAM, of Limehouse, mounted on Iceburg, glides gracefully over a jump at the annual Hornby Horse Show held at SamSon Farms last weekend. Graham won over 30 ribbons during the four-day equestrian competition.

—Limehouse horseman steals show—

entered eight horses in both hunter and jumper events. His major accomplishments included winning the Working Hunter Championship with Likely Story, owned by Morgan Firestone of Lancaster. The Dealer, owned by Ernest Jay of King City, was the Reserve Champion in the same class. Also owned by Ernest Jay, Icecap was acclaimed champion in the Intermediate Jumper Stake while Playford, owned by Edward Bayer of Nobleton, placed second. In the Intermediate Jumper class, Icecap received top honours again and Coppertone, owned by Paul Steinburg of Mississauga, was chosen Reserve Champion. The Dealer placed second in the Hunter Classic, Bonnie Dee was named Reserve Champion in the Confirmation Hunter, and the list goes on. Watching Graham was a show in itself. He would enter an event on one horse, switch horses, and enter the same event again. Obviously, the hectic pace did not affect his performance. Neither did the weather. Daily rain transformed the grounds into a mammoth mud-puddle.

"I enjoy the competitive atmosphere," said Graham, "that's what really interests me - not riding itself."

At 25, Graham has been riding half his life, but didn't start seriously showing horses until five years ago.

He quickly developed expertise as an English rider, and has part interests in "several, mostly thoroughbred horses." A the Dublin Horse Show in Ireland this summer, he hopes to purchase a horse meeting his standards: solid, strong, good-boned and with excellent jumping ability.

Although Graham has trained "dozens" of horses, taught others how to ride and participated in the organization of shows, he doesn't want to pursue a full-time career in horsemanship.

Georgetown girls take part in show

Two of the more than 300 entrants in the four day Hornby Horse Show at SamSon Farms last weekend were Cathy and Betsy Kurylowicz of Georgetown.

Cathy, 16, placed seventh in the Junior Working Hunter division while her sister Betsy, 14, earned the reserve championship.

Their horses, Royal Rhythm, and Robby Burns, had footage trouble because rain made the ground slippery. "The mud sucked them in because they are small horses so they move lightly," Betsy explained.

Both admitted to being "nervous" about competing, but enjoyed the opportunity to meet other riders and test their horsemanship skills.

Six years ago, the girls started taking lessons and intend to continue.

"A common misconception is that you don't need lessons if you know how to ride," said Cathy. "You need people to watch and judge you, so you know what you're doing wrong so you can correct it." "Horsemanship is hard to perfect," she added, "because you're working with something living."

Betsy agreed, "It's not like mastering math."

The Kurylowicz sisters have been showing horses for three years, and plan to enter competitions throughout the summer. Cathy prefers the grace of hunting events whereas Betsy enjoys riding jumpers because she "likes speed."

PIGGY-BACK riding her sister Betsy is Cathy Kurylowicz. Like other entrants in the Hornby Horse Show at SamSon Farms last weekend, the two Georgetown girls found it difficult to walk through the knee deep mud puddles, much less ride.
