

MODERN SETTING

Plan home furnishing for special atmosphere

Planning is the key to atmosphere in home decorating. Mixing individual furnishings from different eras can make a room look like a furniture warehouse.

For example, Oriental rugs and colonial couches are both attractive, but they don't match.

Coordinating furniture with decorating accessories from wallcoverings to linen give a room uniformity. The effect of creating a mood by adhering to a chosen theme is good visually, and results in a room for table. Feeling physically. Gradually add pieces complimentary to each other for a total look, instead of spontaneously buying decorating items which look great in the store but are misfits in your room.

Victorian reproductions (or the real thing) as main pieces in a living room blend well with small marble-topped coffee tables, large framed mirrors, cane or colonial glass lamps and brocade curtains pulled back over sheers.

Wall coverings are best in pale, plain shades, to highlight tapestries, old fashioned paintings and other era decor. For the ancient English sitting room effect shiny hardwood floors as a fireplace would complete the picture.

A totally different look is ultra modern.

Deep shag rug is a must. Today's simplicity in furniture made from chrome or plastic bases covered with cozy cushions contrast effectively with abstract wallpaper in vivid colours.

Bean bag chairs, coloured lights, clear glass coffee tables and contemporary posters focus on today's look.

The message in these examples is: study the home furnishings market. Pick a style which suits your tastes and lifestyle, then slowly develop it by purchasing co-ordinates.

Another plus for the gradual process of theme decorating is financial. If you plan what you need for a desired effect, you can window shop until you spot exactly what you want a price within your budget.

This same philosophy works from the bathroom to the patio.

CVCA wants more land for park

The Credit Valley Conservation Authority will acquire more land in the Silver Creek area for park development. The move was made following a presentation by consultant William Coates Wednesday.

Future plans are to purchase "linkage areas" or lands which connect two CVA-owned properties.

The "core" or valley area of the Niagara Escarpment should be preserved in its natural state, said Mr. Coates. He suggested development of the outer area could include small day-use picnic areas, lookout points, and linked trails, paths or roads for both hiking and transportation.

Campsites are a possible long-range goal.

Developing the west section of Silver Creek was recommended since to the east lie Terra Cotta, Georgetown and Glen Williams.

Mr. Coates also said the CVCA camping and picnic park in Terra Cotta should be expanded.

His reports were based on projected future traffic flow and population in the vicinity of Silver Creek and an in-depth land analysis of the escarpment area, proposed for recreational use.

He says Silver Creek is "attractive and well-located to serve Southern Ontario."
