> attempting to overcome the major stumbling block in providing more apprenticeship opportunities, the creation of on-job training programs. Craft umons have said that employers are reluctant to provide training opportunities for young people.

She urged the group to have young people look at skilled trade opportunities, because such areas as Parry Sound and Northern Ontario have "a crying need" for such people."

Dr. Stephenson said the population in Ontario has not grown that rapidly to allow the academic community to provide jobs for all graduates She feels this will continue into the next decade.
