Agonizing over a job resume, letter

By SUSAN DeFACENDIS

I have spent an entire morning agonizing over the composition of an introductory letter and resume in response to an intriguing newspaper advertisement.

Now for the average man today, this would be an easy task. Most men, by the time they have attained the age of 40, have an imposing array of credits and accomplishments behind them.

They can reel off a list of memberships in prestigious organizations; produce lawyers and bank managers as personal references at the drop of a hat and know exactly to the penny what their skills are worth when it comes to remuneration.

But what of the average woman in the same age bracket?

Where does one begin? To list one's educational background, assuming you can even remember back that far in time, is to practically admit that you were then when they invented the wheel.

Employment experience? Well, listing employers that are 20 years in the distant past is not overly helpful, considering that in the interim they have no doubt retired or passed on to their final reward.

If you wish to give more up-to-date experience, do you think a prospective employer would become excited over a job applicant who claims she can whump up a terrific dish of lasagna? - eliminate "ring around the collar"? - trim the "bangs" out of a seven-year-old's eyes? - miraculously discover dirty socks in unlikely places and kiss injured "pinkies" all better?

Who can a housewife dredge up as a reference? Her good friend the gynecologist? I suppose you could, if required, produce photocopies of your scars to prove the closeness of your relationship, otherwise it would appear to be the local brownie leader or PTA president who controls the balance of power in determining your good character.

State salary required. If you wish to keep your children in the style to which they would like to become accustomed, this is a loaded question. You have to be careful not to price yourself right out of the market but, on the other hand, you cannot sell yourself short.

What you must never do, is to let them know that if only they would select insecure, inexperienced you out of all the other 500 applicants, you would be willing to do the job for practically nothing.

Hobbies? Staving off exhaustion was about the best I could come up with on that one.

I reached the belated conclusion that I should have let my mother write the entire thing for me, after all, one can be much more positive in appraising someone else's abilities. Where a little "toot" on behalf of one's own talents may be acceptable, a full blown blast of the trumpet seems rather poor taste. Yet how else does one beat the competition?

Oh well, the application has been finished, mailed and put firmly out of mind. Even in the unlikely eventuality that they call me for an interview - I don't have a thing to wear anyway.

On wearing T-shirts to school

Dear Ann Landers: Two neighbor boys (brothers) were suspended from school for wearing Farrah Fawcett-Majors T-shirts. The principal said the shirts were "vulgar and inappropriate". He also said most women, when they go to the beach, wear more than Farrah had on when she modeled for that T-shirt.

The mother of the boys was furious. She has told everyone that when her sons return to school (after the suspension period) they will be wearing the T-shirts. She insists their rights of freedom of expression have been violated and she wants them to learn early in life how to stand up for themselves.

A great deal has been said around here on both sides. What do you think? - Ruckis In Texas

Dear Ruckis - I am unable to pass judgement on the T-shirts because I have not seen them. The school principal, however, HAS seen them and declared that they are "vulgar and inappropriate". Since he's in charge, that's good enough for me.

A mother who would send her children to school wearing T-shirts which caused their suspension teaches them to spit in the eye of authority. She also teaches them that they can get a lot of attention by refusing to follow the rules.

I'm in favor of revolution when rights have been violated (that's how this country was born) but kids aren't running the school. I feel sorry for those boys. They're going to have some rough days ahead.

Dear Ann: Today's teenagers need help. Will you give it to them by printing a poem composed by my 16-year-old friend? - H.L.K.

For My Parents

Don't ask what I do
For to know would only hurt.
Be ready to listen
but don't force the words.
Don't give me sermons
for I only want suggestions.
Don't give up on me
when you don't understand the questions.
Take an interest in my life
but don't pry.
Please hear me out
before you ask why.
Take precautions when needed
but don't lock me in.
And please, dear parents, be there when I need a friend. - A Teen

Dear H.L.K.: The first two lines bother me. What are you doing that would hurt your parents? Whatever it is, it's probably hurting you, too. The rest of the poem I'm comfortable with. Thanks for sharing.

CONFIDENTIAL to Loaded with Diamonds and in Love with the Champ: Did you say Champ? You're spelling it wrong.

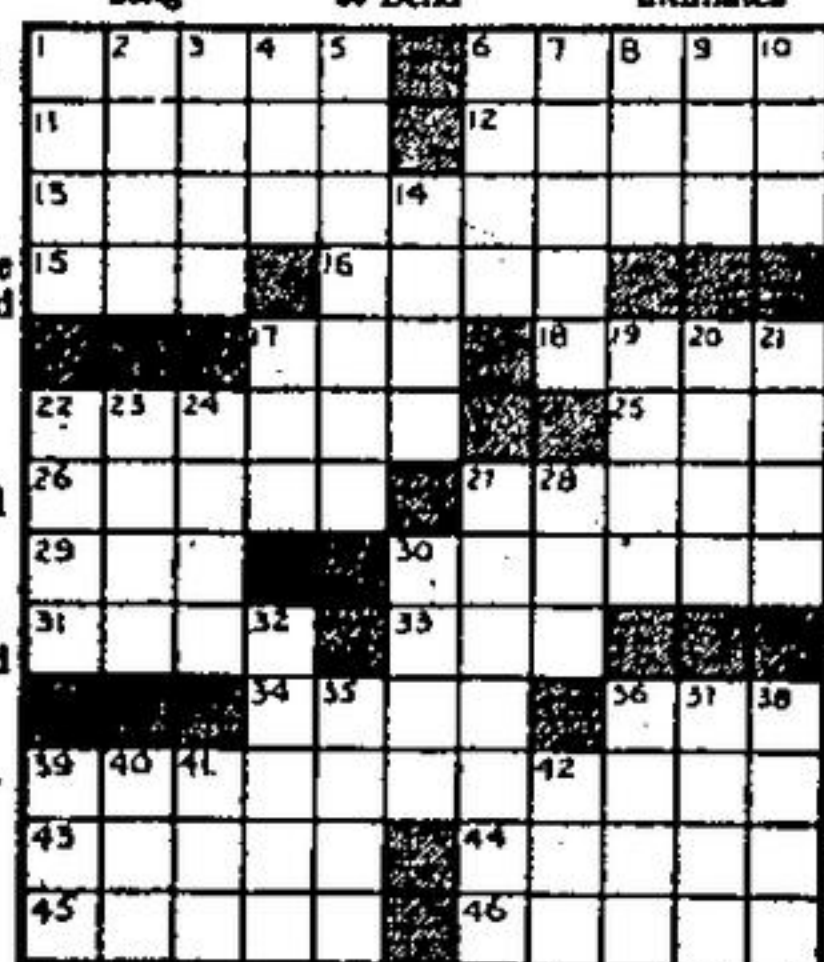

What's prudish? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting - What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11996, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped self-addressed envelope.

APPEARING WEEKLY

Region planner to support Hydro foes

Halton region council will be asked today to throw its support behind Halton Hills opposition to a high voltage transmission corridor running north south through the town.

The region's planning committee last week recommended that an environmental assessment study be done by an independent, qualified consultant to examine alternate routes in Halton Hills and to suggest ways the impact of hydro corridors could be reduced.

Halton Hills has refused Ontario Hydro's proposed amendment to the Esqueping Official plan that would allow the corridors and the necessary rezoning. The Ontario Municipal Board (OMB) will hold hearings on the matter Oct. 24 in Halton Hills.

The planning committee also recommended that the region dismiss as premature Ontario Hydro's application for an amendment to Milton's official plan to allow an east-west corridor on the grounds that the line needs to be slightly relocated and the boundaries affecting the relocation are not yet set.

The alternate route for a north-south corridor through Halton Hills proposed by the region's planner, Robert Cummings, would have it follow the Canadian National Railway track from south of 15 Sideroad past Scotch Block reservoir and down the east side of Third Line to Steeles Ave. where it would run parallel to the east-west corridor.

Mr. Cummings said that although all the ramifications of this alternate route are not known, the staff feels there is sufficient potential merit to warrant further study.

Town, group should merge

Acton's Save-the-Town-Hall committee and Halton Hills council should get together, says Coun. Peter Marks.

Coun. Marks proposed the meeting last week at finance administration committee. He said the meeting would let council learn where the Save-the-Town-Hall committee is going. The two could then discover areas where they could work in concert, he added.

Committee chairman Russ Miller favored the idea. "It may be cheaper to work together and save some money," he said.

The anticipated cost of restoring the old town hall is about $200,000. The Save-the-Town-Hall committee is seeking a one-third grant from the Ontario Heritage Foundation, one-third from Wintario and the balance from fund-raising among the citizens. A feasibility study of the restoration is underway and the committee expect to make a presentation to council before Dec. 31.

This year almost every car maker around will be trying to hand you this line.

Look familiar? It's the Volkswagen Rabbit. But without even looking too closely, it could be one of any number of cars that have recently appeared on the market. Or are about to.

If imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, we're very flattered.

However, it's not the outside line of the Rabbit that makes it so revolutionary, it's what goes on underneath the line.

In the five intensive years of planning and innovation that it took to create the Rabbit, it was continually designed from the inside out. Not vice-versa, like many cars. Looks for looks' sake was never our intention, and that's where we drew the line.

For instance, since our transverse engine was mounted sideways up front, it created a huge amount of room for people and luggage in back. (Far more room we might add, than any other car its size.) And since the engine took up less room, that engineering fact plus extensive wind tunnel tests determined the dramatic slope of the hood.

The sleek hatchback rear end design and the sporty line of the Rabbit's front were no accidents either. Even though they were in part refined by hundreds of test collisions over several years.

Function followed safety. And form follows function. All along the line.

You also get front-wheel drive. 72 kilometers per gallon (45 mpg) on the highway, 47 km/gal (29 mpg) in the city.* You can accelerate from 0 to 80 km/h in a scant 8.3 seconds. (No one has been able to match those specs either.)

You get fuel injection, rack and pinion steering, front disc brakes, steel belted radials, independent 4-wheel suspension, and a whole list of advanced features that other car makers have not even caught on to yet, let alone caught up with.

Drop in at your nearest VW dealer and test drive the astonishing Rabbit.

Why settle for pale imitations when you can buy the original?

There's no comparison.
