

Mmmm GOOD!

Sabrina Bassett gets a helping hand from mother Isabel at the pancake supper at St. John's Church in Stewarttown, Feb. 7. The supper was put on by the St. John's Guild, and Sabrina had a chance to sample some pancakes and sausages from her sister's supper. She expressed a decided preference for the pancakes.

ANGLICAN WOMAN PRIEST SAYS...

No hostility found in church

By MAGGIE HANNAH
Herald staff writer

Allowing women to be ordained as Anglican priests has cut down on the types of vocations available to them within their church says one of the first women ordained as a priest.

Rev. Bev Shanley has been minister at St. George's Lowville and St. John's Nassagaweya since she was ordained 15 months ago. In that time she has had no hostility from her parishioners or from fellow clergymen, she says, although she admits that she's "living in a goldfish bowl."

Bishops and other members of the church are watching women priests to see how well they will be accepted, she says. These people are also interested in how they cope with any difficulties that may arise in family situations if women priests are married.

"We usually move every

seven years in our church," Miss Shanley says, "so they want to see what will happen about a husband's job, for instance, if the woman priest is moved."

Miss Shanley told the Georgetown University Women's Club last week that she was not raised in a particularly devout Anglican home nor was her father a minister. She simply felt a need to devote herself to her church and that need grew as she matured.

Miss Shanley, a St. Catharines native, began her career as a "women's worker" after studying theology at the Anglican Women's Training College in Toronto. Her specialty was education.

There were no standards governing wages or pensions for women workers and sometimes the bishop of the diocese in which they worked wasn't even aware of the fact they were working for one of his churches, she says.

Lack of job security during the 1960s drove many women to leave the church and retrain for other work, she says. She became a deaconess and eventually went into a convent for a period while she tried to decide the course she would follow.

She was offered a chance to come back to the Diocese of Niagara in 1976 and was ordained in November of that year.

Although the idea of a women bishop is not impossible, Miss Shanley doesn't see it happening soon. Women need time to gain the experience before they are going to be given such positions, she feels, but she sees no reason why it can't happen in the future.

tax holdback hinders

The suggestion that residents should withhold municipal taxes in order to force Queen's Park to give Halton a review of regional government will only penalize residents who try it, says the mayor of Halton Hills.

"They'll only hinder themselves," says Tom Hill. "They're the ones who will have to pay the penalty of late taxes. Regional government is here and any Acton residents who don't feel they're getting their fair share should get in touch with works department and just see what's happening in Acton and where the money's coming from."

The mayor notes that if a review is to be done it will have to be initiated by Queen's Park because local government is already aware of how the residents feel and how the situation really stands.

Milk committee elected

By Henry J. Stanley
Jim McCague, our new Zone Director on the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, was guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Halton Milk Committee on Friday, February 3rd, Hillcrest United Church, R.R.2 Georgetown.

Mr. McCague stated that milk marketing in Ontario was up 3.4 per cent for December whereas Halton's production showed an increase of just 2.6 per cent from the previous year. He reminded all producers that they should not lend all of their excess Market Sharing Quota before the end of the dairy year in March as producers will only receive the Federal subsidy on 95 per cent of their quota. Farmers have the option of lending the increased portion of their quota to their neighbours up until the end of this month.

John Kitching, Chairman of the Halton Milk Committee, stated that 1977 had been a busy year. He hoped that everyone would give their full support to the Ontario Milk Marketing Board and stated how pleased Halton was with the accomplishments of our Dairy Princess, Holly Hurren, a finalist in the Ontario competition. Guest speaker was Ted Laing, Milton 5, President of Carnation Milk. Mr. Laing stated that there was no branch of agriculture which had a closer relationship between the producer and the manufacturer than the dairy business. He stressed the importance of new milk products - variety cheeses are now selling 10 million pounds of 25 varieties in Canada with yogurt increasing threefold in consumption in the last four years.

Merv Reynolds, Area Fieldman, Milk Industry Branch, named the milk producers in Halton who had the highest quality records for 1977. The winner was James Pell, Oakville 2. He was followed by Mrs. Barbara Ford, Milton 4; Stan Waters, Georgetown 2; Walter Egger, Milton 6; and Rayner Bros., Milton 1. Very close to meeting the standards and receiving honourable mention were David Anderson, Alex Buchanan, George Clifford Cook, Dalewood Farms, Gordon McDonald, Ronald MacPherson, Bruce Nixon, James Reid, Chris Richardson, Earl Snow, Harold Wettlaufer, Earl Wilson and Larry Workman.

Officers elected for the coming year were Chairman, Bruce McClure, Georgetown 3; Vice Chairman, George Bird, Georgetown 2; Secretary, Treasurer - Horace Blyth, Ballinafad news

By WINIFRED SMITH
Herald correspondent

The course "Needlepoint For Beginners" proved to be popular in the Region of Halton.

There were eleven groups participating on Summary Day which was held on Wednesday afternoon Feb. 8th at Hillcrest Church. There was a total of 217 enrolled in the fall classes. Almost all of the women were present for Summary Day judging by the crowd attending.

Ballinafad had a class of 18. All exhibits showed remarkable skill and originality. There was such a variety of articles including, cushions, pictures, belts, bookcovers, doorstops etc.

One woman in the Ballinafad group was doing a picture, which when completed will be about 12x14 inches and copied from a tiny postage stamp.

Linda O'Connor of Ballinafad was chairman for the afternoon. Little Given showed she not only has a talent for doing needlepoint, but also the gift to write poetry as she commented on the activities of the Ballinafad group, when she gave a reading in the form of verses, which she composed.

The U.C.W. were pleased with the results of the pancake supper. Close to one hundred came out to enjoy the fellowship as well as the feast. The ladies in charge kept the stacks of pancakes high, as they were served hot from the kitchen. Sausages and syrup were served with the pancakes.

On Sunday, Mr. Stiles gave the first of a series of Lenten services. During the worship hour Mr. Don Brown and Mr. Robert Finkerton were inducted to the Session of Ballinafad United Church. As always the Childrens Choir were a delight to hear as they sang the Anthem "That's Why I Love Him".

We are pleased to report that Bobby Kirkwood is feeling better, after being confined to his home for some time, suffering with high fever and weakness. Hope it won't be too long before he is able to be out again.

Gregory Snow has returned home again after visiting his relatives in Edmonton. Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. Kelvin Johnston who recently became Grandparents for the first time. Mr. Johnston was the former minister at the Church here.

Mr. and Mrs. Reg French entertained for some of their friends on Saturday night at their home.

CLERGY COMMENT

Twenty-one and out

By Father O. Devent

More and more we are trained and train ourselves to be orphans by the time we are 21. Our mentality tends to be that we must pretty much cut ourselves off from our parents if we are to be independent and be able to live a life of our own. Even if we don't move out of the house after school we are, at best, in the house but not in the home.

As we get more and more into the teen-age years, we live less and less of a family life and are increasingly by ourselves and with our friends. This set of circumstances is not one that is merely selected by the children, but is also assumed and expected by parents.

Truly this is tragic. We should be passing from one love to another when we get married.

One of the reasons for the frequent failures in marriage is that so many are coming to it from the vantage point of up-rooted singles.

We have established a pattern of living over a period of several years that permits us to follow independently our own inclinations and desires. This brought along that we have gotten set in their ways, that they are used to having things just as they want them, and it is very difficult for them to adapt. If you get too far away from the give and take of family-living, you develop a single mind set.

This is not suggesting some people are bad or flawed; simply that they have trained themselves to live privately. They have developed a whole way of living that makes a true marriage increasingly difficult.

But today it has almost become the norm. This is not good for either side, most especially the young adults.

We must stop pushing them outside the home, we must cease establishing in our minds the expectations that such an eventuality is inevitable and even desirable.

This is going to call for a lot of changes. It's going to mean being willing to treat our grown-up children as adults; to make them full-fledged partners in the house. They are going to have to see it as much their house as ours. There must be increasing give and take as they mature and they must have an increasing say in the style we all live. It's going to mean that parents will have to make sacrifices so that their adult sons and daughters can truly feel at home.

If we don't do these things we are effectively creating environments that call for children to leave as soon as they are capable of supporting themselves.

They have to make themselves orphans in order to be free. Instead of us passing on, they get out.
