

Summertime is many things

ly Gerry Landsborough
This hot sticky weather we've been having lately gives plenty of time for laying back doing nothing. During one of my "nothing" periods I was day-dreaming about all the crazy happenings that mean summertime to me. I hope some of them ring true for your house too.
Thought's For Long
Hot Summer Days
Summertime is ... long hot hot hot lazy days
Summertime is ... wet towels left on the coffee table
Summertime is ... Hey we're all out of Koo-Aid
Summertime is ... Mooooommm I'm bored.
Summertime is ... swimming and sunburn usually in that order
Summertime is ... yes, I remember where your bikini is, you put it in that old prescription bottle of mine - the one about two inches high.
Summertime is ... every kid in the neighbourhood at your table instead of your own
Summertime is you're going to the show with ... who?
Summertime is ... barbecues mouth-watering delicious charcoal brown or otherwise.
Summertime is ... we can't be out of towels again
Summertime is ... packing up to go camping
Summertime is ... unpacking from going camping
Summertime is ... saladas saladas and more salads
Summertime is ... Sure com'on over
Summertime is ... Hey we're all out of ice cubes!
Summertime is ... black flies, mosquitos and sandflies - all of them on you.
Summertime is ... You want to go camping with ... who?
Summertime is ... why can't the flowers grow half as well as the weeds - they're the only thing left green in the whole garden.
Summertime is ... the grass needs cutting
Summertime is ... the fence needs painting
Summertime is ... I'll just lie here for just a few more minutes
Summertime is ... Let's go on a picnic.
Summertime is ... Hey where are all the ice cubes?
Summertime is ... Can't anybody in this house refill ice cube trays?
Summertime is ... you're going roller skating with ... who?
Summertime is ... what do you mean all your clothes don't fit?
Summertime is ... you're going swimming with ... who?
Summertime is ... the sounds and smells of all the wonderful beaches.
Summertime is ... why the Ex can't be here already?
Summertime is ... why can't it be hot - it's too hot; why can't we get rain - it's too wet; Gee I can't wait for fall...
Oh dear, where has the summer gone - I wish it were here again.
Summertime is ... the swish of the waves on the shore; the cry of the gulls; the wonderful fragrance of the early morning; tomatoes fresh from the garden; cold, cold drinks at the close of the day; the sound of the lawnmower; the smell of the barbecue; the banging of the screen door; the warm flickering glow from the campfire; the chattering of nature's friends - birds, frogs, insects, the dogs bark from the down the road.
Summertime is long, hot, lazy, sweaty, wet, itchy, easy going, wonderful, wonderful, wonderful days.

Two Halton students and their "twins" from Quebec competed at Burlington Bowl Friday afternoon as part of the schedule of activities for the students on the Halton Bilingual Exchange. Renee LeMay, foreground, Quebec, Donna Cavlovic, left rear, of Acton, Andree Charlebois, also of Acton, and Lisette Bonin of Quebec, are four of forty-four senior students participating in an exchange program between French-speaking students in Quebec and English-speaking students in Halton.

EXCHANGE STUDENTS FIND Kids will be kids in any language

By LOUI TAYLOR
Herald staff writer
Kids are kids, no matter where they come from or what language they speak. That was the overriding message when the French and English-speaking students of the Halton Bilingual Exchange gathered for some bowling at the Burlington Bowl Friday afternoon.
The students, 22 from Halton and 22 from the Richeleu County in Quebec, were the senior group, Grades 9 to 11, in a month-long exchange program between Quebec and Ontario.
A junior group of 22 students in Grade 8 is also involved in the exchange program. The program was sponsored by the Bilingual Exchange Secretariat in Ottawa and other provincial agencies.
The purpose of the exchange senior group leader Maureen Sweetman said, is to expose the students learning a second language to people who use it as a first language. There is also the cultural aspect of living with a family "to open their eyes to the similarities and differences and to appreciate and understand them in a positive way," she added.
Since the Parti Quebecois was elected to power in Quebec almost two years ago, every event, no matter how insignificant it would have seemed previously, has been examined in the light of the possible separation of Quebec, and the Halton Bilingual Exchange is no exception.
The students from Quebec and Halton expressed their

Committees veto aid, film receives funding

Despite the refusal by two advisory board to approve involvement in an animated film production, the Credit Valley Conservation Authority (CVCA) Thursday budgeted $4,000 for the project.
The $200,000 film to be produced through the National Film Board, deals with water and will be produced through the combined resources of several Ontario conservation authorities.
Gail Maltby, Halton Hills member of the authority and vice-chairman of the parks and recreation committee which rejected the proposal in a joint meeting with the information and education committee May 11, called the move "poor policy" for the proposal to be brought forward by the chairman without going back to committee.
Chairman Grant Clarkson, who originally opposed funding the film said an answer is required so that the producers of the film can determine the amount of funding available and who will receive credit on the final product.
The board rejected a bid to delay a decision until the producers could appear before

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: Last Sunday a young relative was married in a beautiful church ceremony. It was done in exquisite taste, nothing was spared and as expected, it was "the wedding of the year."
At the close of the ceremony when the clergyman said, "I now pronounce you man and wife," the groom lunged at the bride, knocked her headpiece sideways and the two of them engaged in a grade-B movie soul kiss that created quite a stir among observers. You could hear the buzzing all over the children.
The kiss went on and on and one finally the minister tapped the groom on the shoulder and said, "That's enough." His words were amplified by the public address system and everyone laughed.
I, for one, felt this sort of kiss was totally out of place. Others thought it was "refreshingly spontaneous" and "wonderfully expressive." The question of whether or not the minister should have broken the clinch is also being hotly debated. May we hear what Ann Landers has to say on the subject?—Her Side of The Aisle.

Dear Her Side: Maybe I'm a Midwestern square, but I believe passionate kisses should be saved for the honeymoon. I don't fault the clergyman for breaking the clinch. The poor fellow probably didn't know what might happen next. Now that it's over make light of the matter and forget it.
Dear Ann Landers: After reading that letter from the woman who signed herself "No Carbs But Need To Be Alone," I was surprised that you failed to see the obvious solution.
Her major complaint was that Mom and Grandma insisted on sitting in the kitchen while she prepared the evening meal - watching her every move, talking incessantly and getting on her nerves.
Why should a woman who works all day have to come home at night and prepare dinner for her husband and a mother and grandmother? What do those two women do all day that they can't put together a simple meal for four people?
Giving the mother and grandmother this responsibility would help them feel like contributing members of the household. It would also give the working wife the break she deserves. — As I See It.

Dear Ann: In a recent column you gave some very dumb (and dangerous!) advice. You advised a wife to move into the guest room until her husband put his hunting dog out of the bedroom and in the basement or on the back porch.
A man can get another wife any time. A good hunting dog costs at least $250. If the guy is smart he'll let his wife sleep in the basement or on the back porch. The dog might catch cold out there. — Single And Happy
Dear Single: I have a message for you from several million wives. Please stay single and make some nice girl very happy.

Parking lot plan studied

Credit Valley Conservation Authority (CVCA) education officer George Roberts has been asked to prepare a report on construction of a parking lot at the proposed Silver Creek conservation area.
The recommendation, approved by the CVCA authority membership Thursday, was made by the Credit Valley Conservation Authority Foundation, an advisory body which reports to the CVCA and calls for about 40 parking spaces for public and staff.
The Silver Creek area is now under plan design by William E. Coates and Associates. To be built on about 3,200 acres of land from Silver Creek on Highway 7 to the present Terra Cotta Conservation Area, the new area would include an education centre, camping, recreation and other facilities.

Educators address course

Emerson Lavender Education director for the Halton board of education and the new principal of Acton high school, Wally Watkins, were two of the guest speakers at the Sheridan College principal's course recently.
Mr. Lavender drew an analogy between the future of education and canoe trip, describing the trip as an exciting and dangerous journey requiring energy, skill and togetherness to face the new challenges arising in education.
Mr. Lavender compared declining enrollment, denial of positions to bright, energetic teachers, non-renewable resources, decreased financial resources to increased demands and changing societal attitudes to white water and dangerous rocks on a canoe trip. The quiet pool at the end of the trip, once the place for meditation, reflection and recreation of energies, is now the place of accountability, he said.
Mr. Watkins, who has been assigned as principal of Acton high school following the promotion of Dean Fink to area superintendent, spoke to the 85 candidates in the course about techniques to develop a positive school environment.
To create such an environment, teachers must "respect the sanctity of the individual", Mr. Watkins said. "We can create such a school if we recognize that people are different and therefore instruction must involve individualization to encourage students to the limit of their ability but not to afford them by experiences or demands that are beyond them".
