The Acton Sabres-Streetsville Derbys trade which saw Paul Pickard head for the Derbys for four players, infurlated an Acton native with an impressive hockey back-

"That they could attract a player of that calibre to Acton in the first place was a tremendous achievement," Tost said. "I do not think they got much in return for him. The Sabres got guallender Kent Moffatt, defensemen Mait Lambert and Les Smith and a reserve forward. Moffall played with the Sabres at the beginning of last year until he was traded to the Derbys. He did not report to the Derby camp this year and therefore had not seen any action at all up to the trade.

"We could have had Moffatt for nothing," Tost said. Tost said that the Pickard incident shows that it is difficuit to attract top-flight players into a small town. "You bring in these players and then the local guys start making it tough on him " he

One of the defensemen the Sabres received, Lambert, is an American and would not be eligible for the Winter Games. The Derbys are a present involved in playdow: o quality for the Games.
