Attendance again good as 9,500 see action

Approximately 9,500 attended this year's Georgetown International Bantam Tournament.

Harry Levy said that approximately 7,800 people paid their way in. The remainder is made up of players whose teams had been eliminated. The tournament got off to a low start, but Levy said that the crowds picked up as the week went on.

The fact that Georgetown DRG Stationery Bantams made it to the third round helped, the chairman said. The tournament's best day was Tuesday when 1,370 fans watched the day's games. The Georgetown Major Bants played their first game that day. They defeated Brockville in overtime.

For the final day of the tournament at Alcott Arena

Levy said that 1,250 fans attended to watch the action. The chairman said that the attendance figures are approximately the same as last year's.
