

GOOD LUCK GUYS

Regular patrons of the McGibbon Hotel took up a collection last week for a gift for the new owners, Nick and George Markou, to wish them luck with their business. Presenting the flowers are

Vacation Guide

Canada--so much to go for

Package vacations are a great way to see Canada, and this year there are more of them than ever. The Canada; So Much To Go For program, a joint effort by the Canadian Government Office of Tourism and private industry to encourage Canadians to travel at home, is offering 80 package tours from five private industry partners. The partners are Air Canada, CP Air, VIA Rail Canada, Hospitality Tours-Quebecair and Pacific Western-Transair.

Want to see the rocky fjords of Newfoundland? VIA Rail offers the 10-day Newfoundland Venturer tour which includes all the sights and incredible scenery of Canada's newest province, plus a train ride to and from Montreal and a quick look at Nova Scotia, where you catch the ferry to Newfoundland. A rental car, when you arrive, ensures the flexibility to do and see what you want - historic St. John's, rugged Gros Morne National Park and rustic fishing villages. Cost from Montreal is $400.

How about the sunny wheatfields of Saskatchewan? A unique way to see this province is the Pacific Western-Transair Saskatchewan tour which allows unlimited bus travel anywhere in Saskatchewan for seven days (49). An alternative is a Saskpass tour where you stay in selected hotels in any of five Saskatchewan cities for $149 per person, based on double occupancy. Saskatchewan is known for its hospitality, so prepare to meet lots of friendly people.

The soaring mountains and spectacular scenery of British Columbia and western Alberta inspire more tours than almost any other region. Air Canada, CP Air, VIA Rail and Pacific Western-Transair together have at least 20. They usually start and end in Vancouver, Victoria or Calgary and include the Rocky Mountains high spots - Banff, Jasper and other national and provincial parks, the eerie Athabasca Glacier, beautiful Lake Louise and various hot springs resorts. Most feature bus travel for the main part of the journey with prices ranging from around $225 to $300 (based on double occupancy and depending on the season) for nine to 14 days.

The four big entertainment spots in central Canada - Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec City - are also featured in numerous tours. Air Canada's nine-day City Highlights package is one example.

Your trip starts with two nights at the Royal York Hotel in Toronto where you can visit the Ontario Science Centre, the Royal Ontario Museum, Ontario Place, the huge ultra-modern Eaton Centre and the numerous theatres that keep Toronto constantly entertained. Then it's on to Ottawa, Canada's capital, by train, for two nights at the beautiful new Inn of the Provinces. You're within walking distance of the Parliament Buildings, Rideau Canal, National Arts Centre and Sparks Street Mall.

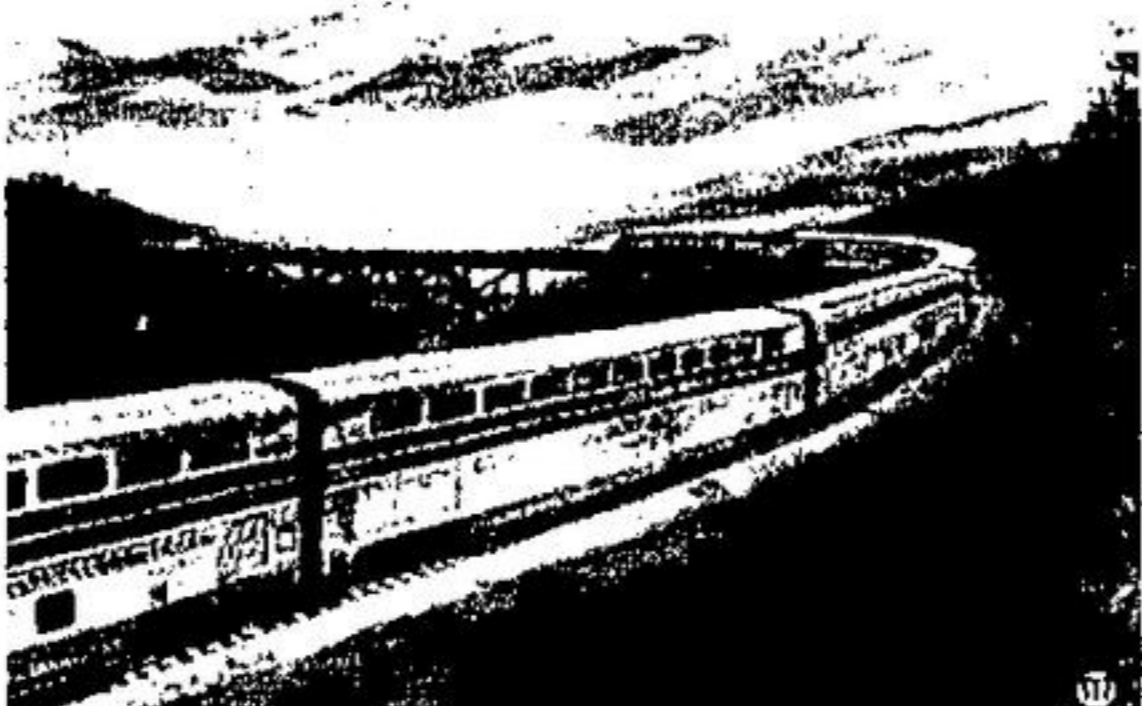

From there you fly to Quebec City, one of Canada's oldest and most historically significant cities, for a couple of nights at the Hilton. The last part of the trip is two days in Montreal, an exciting place by anyone's standards. Total cost from Toronto is $315.

Similar tours from VIA Rail and CP Air feature different highlights (Niagara Falls, Chateau Montebello or Sherbrooke) and alternative modes of travel, but most include the same major cities. Check around to see which package most appeals to you.

Hospitality Tours-Quebecois concentrate on the province of Quebec featuring everything from cozy weekends in Montreal or Quebec City to six-day trips through to Gaspe Peninsula or the Laurentians.

Many, such as the Quebec City and Laurentian Resorts package, offer the best of both urban and rural. The basic tour is two days and nights exploring the excitement of Quebec City with two more days of relaxing fun at Manoir du Lac Delage in the Laurentians. (You have the option of adding nights in Quebec City.) As with most Hospitality Tours-Quebecois packages, prices depend on which of three categories of hotel you choose. For the very best, prices start at $124 per person based on double occupancy; for more conventional accommodation, $104.

Air Canada's North of 60 Tour, CP Air's Adventure Routes and Pacific Western Transair's Capital City Tour (which includes Whitehorse and Yellowknife among their capital-city starting points) appeal to more adventurous travellers with unbelievable trips through the incredible scenery of northern Canada. For a touch of the unusual, try golfing under the midnight sun in the Northwest Territories, panning for gold in the Yukon or bussing into Alaska via the Top of the World Highway. Other trips go to northern parts of the provinces for a glimpse of the unique attractions and scenery these areas offer.

Other packages, such as CP Air's Camper Canada Routes, allow complete freedom to go where and when you want. CP Air flies you to Vancouver, Edmonton, Calgary or Toronto where you pick up a camper or motor home and go wherever you please for eight days. It's ideal for families. Prices start at $211 including air fare.

Accommodation on package tours can range from luxury hotels and resorts to ranches, apartments and university campuses; and transportation can include train, plane, bus, automobile, boat or all five. No matter what part of Canada you want to see, what mode of travel you prefer or what type of accommodation you like, there's a vacation package that suits your budget.
