Economic nightmare is coming to Canada

By Gerry Landsborough
This week's column is written on a very depressing note, but it is our belief that sometime you will have to face straight out what lies ahead with no soft peddle, no smooth edges.

Over the past few years in this space we have urged Canadians to become more "aware" of the world around them. We have lived in a fools paradise for several years. Crisis does not come overnight it is a slow process with clearly marked sign posts along the way. We are a nation of consumers not conservers. In the next few months we will come face to face with what a good portion of the world already lives with.

President Jimmy Carter has warned America that they are in a recession. The increase in oil prices will cause many job losses this coming winter. Carter predicted hundreds of thousands of people will be unemployed.

PLAIN BLACKMAIL.
What the Arab nations have done, is blackmail plain and simple. "Our price - or nothing." This almost doubling of the old prices will plunge the world into an economic nightmare.

Canadians will be much more fortunate than many other nations. We have natural resources - we have the technology - we have the manpower - what else is needed?

North America thrives on the consumption of energy neither ourselves or our neighbors to the south have exercised the proper restraints. The United States of America will not stay on bended knee to the increasing demands of the Arab nations for long.

Gasoline shortages in the States have reached critical level and what happens in the States will happen here the desire for it to be different won't change history.

You will always have a certain amount of experts telling you another crash will never happen that the energy crisis is another great hoax. Upon who or for what purpose the experts are always rather vague about. However the line-ups for gas in the States, the inability to move produce, the violence, all speak for a "reality" that is happening in America today.

So much for the gloom and doom of it - the next logical question is what can we do about it?

Generally speaking not too much but we can be prepared. Lock gas caps are already rare in the States, people are according to border stores coming here for them. Get one now, lock caps will be a must.

FOOD PRICES
Food prices will go up of sight this winter if the gas shortage continues - stock up on what you can.

Don't extend your credit buying - use your cards only for emergency items an extra ten dollars a month in a crunch may make or break you.

In general tighten your belt Canada for what is coming will make the depression of the 30's look like the good old days.

Crisis can make or break a nation - people can pull together and come out the better for it or they can pull apart. What is coming will be a turning point for Quebec.

Hard economic times bring about many strange social offshoots - suicides are on the increase - family breakups - etc.

A recent phenomenon in Britain is the height soccer violence has risen too. In Britain the soccer fans fight one another. Unlike our hockey games where most of the punches are between players, in Britain the fans are well into things. In the north of England one group of soccer fans decapitated a fan from the south by putting him on a train track. This kind of violence borders if not transcends insanity. Like an elastic band people can only be stretched so far. One psychiatrist likened the violence to the Circus of ancient Rome.

A mob out of control hurling hate at one another becomes almost a living entity sprawling across large areas leaving a trail of blood and death behind. Soccer violence is merely another shadow of what's to come.

The depression of the 30's spawned the street gangs, the rackets, and ultimately the great war, and nothing today gives any indication that it will be any different this time around.

Canadians are a proud and hearty people with determination and unity we can and will survive anything - the key to it all is to be prepared.
