Works projects postponed

Three public works projects planned for completion in Halton Hills this year have been postponed by Halton region until 1980.
Subject to regional council's approval this week, the three projects, representing a total expenditure of more than $200,000, will be among the seven region-wide projects deferred to the 1980 budget to make room for other planned items whose costs are higher than anticipated.
Among the local items deferred are a $150,000 addition to the water pumping station on Maple Avenue in Georgetown, aimed at increasing the plant's storage capacity; the installation of a $44,000 diesel generator set at the Prospect Park well in Acton; and a $19,400 for a watermain project along Agnes Street between Main Street and Willow Street.

The deferral of seven projects enabled the region's public works committee last week to trim its water revenue budget by about $50,000. That amount will become what public works director Bob Moore called an "emergency fund".
Included among the 23 projects remaining in the 1979 budget is a two-phase water-main installation project for Glen Williams. With Phase One estimated to cost $251,000 and Phase Two $114,500, the mains will be installed along Karen Drive, Alexander Street, Park Street, Erin Street, Beaver Street and Confederation Drive.
