

Sports Week

Cross country runners from GDHS established themselves as the premier team in Ontario, the first week of November. Five of their six teams took provincial titles, an unprecedented finish in the OFSSA competitions. Here Arlene Gray, number 585 on the inside, sprints to the finish line in an attempt to surpass an opposition runner.

Ian Clark established himself as one of the best young runners in the world this year. The GDHS student placed fifth in the world championships in Limerick, Ireland. He also won several local and international cross country runs. He is a definite Olympic prospect.

Jeff Haines pitched his Glen Williams team to a 29 inning loss against Hespeler in September.

Kris Barber and Kelly Johnson put Georgetown on the International figure skating map this year with their superlative pairs dancing performance at home and abroad, in such places as Moscow. The two (Barber from Glen Williams) were recently in the USSR for Skate Moscow. They may be representing Canada at this winter's Olympics in Lake Placid New York.

Stacey Hurley improved her tennis game considerably in 1979, taking tournament after tournament to rank her among the province's best young players. She could be pro bound.
