Christine Kogan loses squash consolation inter-club B final

Seeded seventh among the 28 women competitors at the weekend Ontario B squash championship in Markham, Christine Kogon of the Georgetown Racquet Club lost out in the consolation round and in so doing lost out in her bid to move up into the select A division.

The veteran player, and a member of the local racquet club, won her first two matches at the Mayfair 3-0 then lost her third match 0-3. This moved her out of contention for the championship and into the consolation plate. Here she beat the number five seeded player, then lost again to the number eight seeded player to eliminate her from further play. The winner of the tournament moves up to the select

A division which is limited to about the 10 best squash players in the province.

At times the going got tough for the Gems Sunday night as Greg Thompson shows here. But, as the saying goes, when that happens the tough get going. And the Gems did as they came out in the third period and scored four times to win 7-4 and force last night's fifth playoff game with Burlington and stave off elimination.
