Night meetings for region?

The possibility of holding Halton regional council meetings in the evening has again been raised.

Burlington Coun. David LaCombe asked council last Wednesday to investigate the feasibility of holding at least one council meeting a month during the evening. Council referred the suggestion to its administration and finance committee.

"It is becoming more and more clear to me and other members of this council that we as a political body appear to be remote and divorced from the people of this region," Coun. LaCombe said.

"At the present time, it is nearly impossible for the average citizen to attend our day time meetings."

Coun. LaCombe also suggested that committee chairmen discuss with the members of their respective committees about the possibility of holding some meetings in the evening.

"We have to establish a new rapport with the people of this region," Coun. LaCombe said.

Oakville Coun. Terry Mannell said that he felt the concept was good but he wasn't sure if it could be implemented.

"The regional clerk, Garfield Brown, gets enough blame for me being away most nights," Coun. Mannell said. "I don't think my wife would appreciate another night."

"If you're going to go this route then you should have all the council meetings at night," Oakville Coun. Carol Gooding said. "It's not good enough to have them only once a month, because anyone interested in coming wouldn't have any sense of continuity."

Coun. LaCombe said he realized that a night meeting once a month would not eliminate the problem in its entirety, but it would be the first step regional government could make to become more open to the people.

Burlington Coun. Pat McLaughlin said there was no demand from the public in his ward and that only specific issues such as those dealt with at public meetings got people out.

"I don't believe for one minute that this recommendation was made out of a genuine concern for people," he said. "I think the reason you see this here before us is because it's an election year."

Oakville Coun. Ron Planché said he felt the principle was good but claimed he remembered many instances where he had gone to public meetings and no one had shown up.

"It's a deeper problem than we think," he said. "Perhaps the only solution to this alienation problem is for us to do our jobs better."

HE'S NO SEPARATIST

Georgetown homeowner Ross Nalra is a pro-unity man, despite what these signs on his house might suggest. The former Quebec resident recently returned with a neighbor from a business trip in la belle province and decorated his house with the souvenirs upon his return, but more as a jokingly sarcastic comment for his neighbors, with whom he's often discussed the sovereignty-association issue, than as a show of sympathy for Premier Levesque's "out" campaign. The Quebec referendum takes place this Tuesday.

Miss Brampton

Young women ages 18 to 24 are invited to enter this year's Miss Brampton Flower Festival pageant, involving weekly fashion events and a gala ball between May 23 and June 20. Beginning May 23 with a fashion show at Bramalea City Centre, where contestants will model apparel from the centre, the pageant also includes press and photo sessions, a pool party, the pageant night at Lester Pearson Theatre June 17 and the floral ball and participation in the parade June 20. The girl chosen Miss Brampton will compete in the annual Miss Canada pageant. Information: Jessie Bissett 457-4446, or Murray Vanlaleem 451-8240.
