

Vacation Guide

Smart packing can "make" or "break" your vacation

How you pack may determine the success or failure of your vacation.

That warning is echoed by many veteran travelers who learned the hard way that a heavy suitcase seems to get heavier every day—especially when it is expanded by odds and ends purchased en route.

Freelance writer Dan Schlessberg, who travels frequently from his New Jersey home with assignments from sports and travel magazines, warns that an overstuffed suitcase can make a trip unbearable.

"To get the most out of your vacation travel, you have to put something of yourself into the planning," he explained. "But it's better to pack too little than too much."

"Unless you're on a fancy cruise—where dressing up is part of the fun—two mix-and-match daytime get-ups and one smart item for evenings is actually enough for men or for women. Self-discipline is so important.

"Also important is how to pack valuables—jewelry, identifying documents, medication, and spare glasses or contacts should be hand-carried aboard in case the regular baggage is delayed or lost."

"Charge cards, travelers' cheques and cash should be carried in pocket or purse, along with tickets, vouchers, passport and, if necessary, visas."

"Discipline begins at home," he reported. "Pick out the suitcase you will use and stick with it. Anyone who comes home with clothes that weren't worn has packed too much. It should be a lesson for next time."

Travelers should study the climate of their destination before opening a suitcase. Travel agents can be of assistance, especially in providing travel guide books with hints on appropriate clothing to bring along.

Those traveling on group tours can often depend on their tour documentation to provide additional hints on climate and culture.
