Smiling faces

Fluctuating space shortages and surpluses are predictable enough in community newspapers, but last week, The Herald ran out of room in its special Pioneer Days supplement. The photos on this page of downtown storefronts and the people who work behind them ought to have been included last week, but just didn't make it. Nevertheless, we feel these fine merchants and professional people can't be overlooked, so we're featuring their smiles this week. Our apologies for the lateness.

McNAMARA JEWELLERS

Irene Graff

McNAMARA JEWELLERS, owned by Marion McNamara, who now resides in Galt, is under the management of Irene Graff, a resident of Georgetown for 35 years.

In 1946, Cecil McNamara opened this business and in 1957, Ms. Graff began her many years of faithful service to this business.

Sтивен McNamara of the family line, works in the store summers, while studying Business Administration at Sheridan College.

This store carries a general jewelry and gift line of goods in limited space as well as Bulova, Caravelle, Wittnauer and Cardinal watches.

Silver-plated hollow ware is on display together with crystal and china giftware. The precious metals include carat gold and sterling silver jewelry and of interest to the public, a selection of 1928 jewelry is also displayed.

Watch and jewelry repairs are done on location and in some cases sent out for service.

A selection of stone rings, diamond rings and wedding bands may be seen in the showcase at McNAMARA JEWELLERS, another longtime business establishment in the "hub" of shopping in downtown Georgetown.
