

HENRY'S FEELING MORE SECURE

Operation Provident, a crime prevention program operated in conjunction with Halton Regional Police, has begun visiting businesses in Halton Hills and Milton with engraving tools to inscribe a registered serial number of office and business equipment, at no cost to the business. The number is registered with police forces across Canada to facilitate recovery of the equipment, should it be stolen. Arbitration ends contract talks stalemate Halton Regional Police have gone to arbitration for the first time in six years in an attempt to resolve their contract dispute. The negotiating committees from the police commission and the Halton Regional Police Association met with arbitrator Gail Brent Friday in Burlington to present their proposals. The arbitrator has 60 days in which to file a report, but association executive member Staff Sgt. John Van der Lelle said a decision is expected within three or four weeks. Negotiations between the association and the commission have been stalemated since March. The association is seeking a pay increase of 15 per cent for 1980. This would increase the salary of a first-class constable to $24,971 from $21,714. The commission is offering a raise of 7.5 per cent, which would give a first-class constable a salary of $23,342. The association is also seeking two-man patrol cars between 4 p.m. and 8 a.m., but the commission says this is not necessary in Halton.

The association says increases in violent crimes make it increasingly necessary to have two-man patrols on the evening and night shifts, but the commission says Police Chief James Harding already has the power to order two-man patrols in emergencies. The commission is also concerned about the cost of two-man patrols. The association is asking to have police cadets put into the uniformed bargaining unit, instead of under the civilian contract, as they are now. They are also requesting a fully paid dental plan. VIOLENT CRIMES Staff Sgt. Van der Lelle said the association is pleased with the meeting with the arbitrator. Staff Sgt. Van der Lelle said the association's request for a 15 per cent increase is to catch up and to keep up with inflation. "Nobody is keeping up with inflation, but the police have been worse off than almost any other sector," Staff Sgt. Van der Lelle said.

Use proper fuses - HHFD stickers

Thousands of caution labels are being distributed across Ontario by electrical and fire authorities warning consumers to use proper fuses "to prevent fires". These stickers are designed to be affixed to panelboards and urge people to use only heat sensitive fuses marked "D" or "P" for electric furnaces, dryers, ranges, air conditioners, water and baseboard heaters. This caution is a follow-up to a number of pamphlets issued in the last couple of years by Ontario Hydro. The stickers are available through the Halton Hills Fire Department; simply phone 877-5185 and ask for the department. As a result of the concern expressed by the Canadian electrical authorities CSA has made available to the regulatory authorities this label in an effort to warn the public of fire dangers in fuse boxes. "We have received over 10 reports of fires in the last year, in fuse boxes which have not been confined to the panelboard," explains Bob White, CSA's assistant manager, Audits and Investigations Section. Most of the fires occurred in the pull-out section of the panelboard which holds 20 to 60 amp fuses. These are used for water heaters, clothes dryers, ranges and electric heaters. This overheating was probably caused by moisture, loose fuses, loose connections and/or overloading circuits with fuses of improper ratings. We have not received any reports of fires where heat sensitive fuses were used, that is why we are urging the public to use fuses marked "D" or "P". The "D" and "P" fuses are heat sensitive and will open at a temperature before damage is caused to the fuse holder. It has been a requirement of the Canadian Electrical Code for the last eight years, that heat sensitive fuses be used in circuits with a high heating and cycling load. "D" fuses in both cartridge and plug shapes, have been available for many years. However, fuses marked "P" are relatively new. Cartridge fuses shaped like a cylinder, marked "P", will be available this summer. The screw-in plug fuses marked "P" are not expected to be on the market until 1981. "D" MEANS DELAY The "D" means time delay and "P" stands for panelboard. Some appliances such as some air conditioners, require the time delay feature because the initial starting load is very high and could blow an ordinary fuse. "It is evident, by the number of failures we have received, that homeowners are unaware that heat sensitive fuses have been a requirement of the Canadian Electrical Code since 1973," says White. "Although heat sensitive fuses are more expensive, they will open at a lower temperature than ordinary fuses which should prevent serious overheating of the fuse holder. We have carried out extensive tests indicating that "D" or "P" fuses can prevent fires." This label is being distributed by most of the electrical authorities in eastern Canada where fused panelboards are commonly used. The sticker, in fluorescent orange, shows a drawing of a cartridge fuse and plug fuse and states "These fuses can prevent fires. CAUTION: Stick this label on your fuse box. Only fuses marked "D" or "P" are heat sensitive. Use only "D" or "P" fuses for electric furnaces, dryers, ranges, air conditioners, water and baseboard heaters. BEWARE, if these fuses continue to blow, your fuse box may need maintenance, call a qualified electrician."

HOME OF THE WEEK

PLAN N° 0-1294
11.8m x 38.1ft / pl 10in / po

HIGH-STYLE LEISURE HOME WITH UN-FINISHED LOFT

The larger family, or one which entertains occasional week-ending guests, will find this one-and-a-half storey saffron style cottage an ideal leisure retreat. The design is suitable for either the narrow or medium frontage recreational building site, depending upon whether or not the optional carport is constructed. The lower level provides 198 square feet of finished floor area, for present use; and the second level contains a further 438 square feet of un-finished floor area for later development, according to individual family tastes and space requirements.

The weather-sheltered main entry leads into a compact vestibule-style reception foyer and closet storage area, from whence traffic flows directly forward into the very large rectangular living room. The living room features a large energy-efficient Franklin-style wood-burning stove and sliding glass doors leading onto an elevated rear-facing balcony. The lofty soffit ceiling of the living room lends a sense of added spaciousness.

A well-planned U-shaped kitchen provides generous counter-top work surfaces, abundant cupboard storage and a step-saving work triangle. It could easily be constructed to provide a convenient snack-bar counter separating the living room and kitchen, for those who prefer.

Two large finished bedrooms are positioned on either side of the central bath and linen storage closet. Each has excellent closet storage and exposure for view and natural light. Additional bedrooms facilities could be developed on the un-finished second level, or some combination of bedrooms and family room-rooms, according to individual family requirements.

This thoughtfully laid-out main level is enhanced in a crisp, styled and attractive exterior, finished in vertical channel siding for economy of construction and ease of maintenance.

The sloping roof surfaces could be finished in a variety of materials, from shingles to shakes.

This is an ideal leisure home for either weekend or forest, and which will provide excellent facilities for the week-ending and holidaying family which requires style, economy and convenience.
