

Halton Hills' new recreation co-ordinator enjoys a fast game of tennis in her free time. Here she takes lessons at Joseph Gibbons park.

Recreation planning not new to Acton rec co-ordinator

Halton Hills, and Acton in particular, has a new municipal recreation co-ordinator in the form of Joy Gwilliam.

Joy, who was raised in Richmond Hill, went to the University of London where she received her B.A. in physical education. Joy later attended Fanshawe College in the same city and left one year later with a recreation leadership diploma.

All this obviously stood her in good stead with the ministry of housing, which employed Joy in the summers between semesters, hiring her as one of London's recreation co-ordinators.

One of the problems Joy encountered in London was the many high-rise buildings built on the city's periphery.

"When you have buildings like that, there's a problem for the residents," Joy claims. "They generally have to travel into the city core for their sources of recreation. In London, we tried to set up programs closer to the people. There was more community recreation, rather than city recreation."

Joy was responsible for developing these programs and selling them to the recreation department. Her job in Acton, which starts the end of this month, will entail much the same duties, only on a much smaller scale.

In London, Joy was responsible for a considerably larger staff, co-ordinating as many as 30 people in the summer.

Adding to Joy's general experience was a trip she took after she left high school. She spent a summer travelling in Europe before coming home to settle into life at the university.

Joy's family includes two younger brothers and two older sisters, who are both married.

As for hobbies, it's been rumored that Joy has been hanging around the Joseph Gibbons tennis courts trying to improve her game. Instructor Ed Serjeantson claims she's progressing nicely.

New Acton school gets funding priority

Halton-Burlington MPP Julian Reed explained the ins and outs of financing a new school to members of the St. Joseph's Parent Teachers Association at a meeting in Acton last Tuesday.

The Halton Separate School Board has purchased a site for the new St. Joseph's School, and is now seeking funding from the ministry of education for the construction. The site is located on the Nelles property near the Acton Legion.

Mrs. Vince Whelan said Mr. Reed explained the procedure for getting funds for a new school, and indicated his support for St. Joseph's.

"We are the number one priority with the board," Mrs. Whelan said. "The school board has purchased the site with no guarantee that they'll get funding from the ministry."

Mrs. Whelan said enrollment at St. Joseph's will exceed 200 students by this September, and the school will need at least one more portable "if we can find somewhere to put it" to cope with the number of students. She hoped for target date for opening the new school is September, 1981.
