The wild wheelbarrow racers took over Main Street in the Glen Monday for their careening vehicles. The speeds were in excess of 50 yards in ten seconds, which explains the need for the Louis Charlebels was master of ceremonies for the opening of Back to Acton Days Friday evening. The evening's entertainment featured the Acton Citizens Band, MPP Julian Reed on banjo, square dancing and highland dancing.

Nobody was telling what was in the baby bottles in the competition Monday in Glen Williams, but the men seemed to be having fun trying to drain the baby bottles of whatever was inside. This couple didn't finish in the money, but it looks like they had a good time anyways.

It took a steady hand and a keen eye to knock down even one sponge, but the target shoot was one of the more popular games at the Ballinafad Canada Day celebrations.

The tall and the short of Georgetown Girls' Pipeband were on hand to open up Canada Day celebrations in Ballinafad. Following the girls is a hastily gathered parade of spectators and games participants.

If there was only some way he could get his teeth into it.... This young fellow seems to be having a hard time keeping his teeth close enough to the doughnut to get a mouthful. What makes it doubly difficult is not being able to use his hands.

These kids were certainly in the Mardi Gras spirit Sunday evening in Glen Williams as the sensational Jazz Band pumped out good old fashioned dixieland at the village's Canada Day celebrations. The band members are: Dan Edwards, banjo; Brian Graville, trumpet; Gary Breitchaupt, drums; Trevor Hodgson, clarinet and Bryan Day on bass.

VI Haines brought along her parasol to protect her from the elements along the parade route, be they rain or sun. On Monday, the sun managed to win out over the clouds that threatened the Canada Day celebrations from time to time. Her two young friends don't seem sure whether they're happy or sad about the weather, but at least they were able to ride in the parade, which went from Mullen Place to the Glen Town Hall.
