

Canada, United States share park across an international boundary

tail and mule deer. I recall getting up early one morning and on the way out of the Township, I passed a small farm house. On the lawn was a badminton net and on either side starting at each other two deer, apparently ready for a game. For a moment I thought I had had one too many the night before. That same day on the way to Cameron Lake I had to stop the car while about six big horns decided to play traffic cops. Cars were backed up both ways and photographers had a field day.

The bighorns were reminding us we were the visitors and that we should slow down and enjoy the scenery.

Bird life is also abundant within the park and you can observe such species as osprey, water ouzel, ptarmigan, Clark's nutcracker, thrushes and even the endangered bald eagle.

If you'd like to rent a boat and canoe a lake you can do that too. Or take a boat cruise on Waterton Lake. Bring along a picnic lunch, take a bit of a hike in the mountains and then, catch a later cruise back to town.

Then there's the park's interpretive program (mid-June through August) with something for everyone from a children's program designed to give them an early appreciation of nature, to guided hikes ranging from a couple of hours to all day. Other elements include photography excursions, conducted walks, wilderness hikes, fireside chats, auto caravans, slide and film presentations. There is even a roving naturalist who visits various roadside exhibits just waiting to be asked questions.

Should your interest be in geology you'll find Waterton-Glacier a fascinating place. The area has some of the oldest sedimentary rock in North America dating back 1.5 billion years. Here you'll find old rock on top of new! About 65 million years ago tensions within the earth built up and became so massive that the rocks began to warp and fold and finally they broke. A huge slab from the west slid up and over the eastern ranges covering rock a billion years younger. The same process has developed other mountain ranges around the world, but few can rival the Lewis Overthrust of Waterton-Glacier.

Another bit of information. With energy on everyone's mind these days it's interesting to note that in energy-rich Alberta the first oil well was drilled in Waterton Park at Laneham Creek in 1902. You can visit the site.

Just entering Waterton is a thrill. From the rolling prairie you are suddenly confronted with the majestic peaks of the colorful mountains with their distinctive shades of red, green, white, buff, brown and violet. They seem to be calling out to the artist, waiting to be placed on the painter's canvas.

As if the park didn't have enough to offer, there's an added bonus for anyone visiting the Province of Alberta this year. The province is celebrating its 75th anniversary and every city and town has the welcome mat out in traditional western style, but with even more enthusiasm than usual.

Getting to Waterton-Glacier is no problem. By automobile in the U.S. you can reach the park from U.S. Highway 2 and 89 and in Canada from Alberta Highways 5, 6 and 3.

Air service in the U.S. is available to Great Falls, Montana 200 km (143 miles) southwest of the park and to Kalispell, Montana, 32 km (20 miles) southwest. In Canada you can fly to Lethbridge, Alberta, 128 km (80 miles) northwest of the park; to Calgary, 264 km (164 miles) north and to Pincher Creek which is 55 km (34 miles) from the park.

Car rentals are available at Great Falls, Kalispell and Whitefish, Montana and in Lethbridge, Pincher Creek and Calgary. Book rentals ahead.

By rail, Amtrak stops at West Glacier (Belton) and East Glacier Park in the U.S. and in Canada VIA Rail's Canadian stops in Calgary. Local buses connect with transcontinental lines in Great Falls and Kalispell in the U.S. and in Pincher Creek in Canada.

There are numerous package vacations that include the park available in Canada the U.S. and overseas. For up to date prices and other information consult a travel agent in your area. Types of packages include camping, trail riding, golf, scenic and others.

For information about the park you can write: Waterton Lakes National Park, Waterton Park, Alberta, T0K 2M0 or phone 403-859-2262. For accommodation within the park write: Waterton Chamber of Commerce, Waterton Park, Alberta, T0K 2M0.
