

SHHH! CARTOONIST AT WORK

Laura seems to be enjoying drawing some birds to fill the sky of her picture.

St. Joseph's out of jurisdiction, board won't alleviate fire hazards

The Halton Separate School board has no plans for major construction work on St. Joseph's School in Acton to remedy problems in the fire inspection system discovered by Fire Prevention Officer Larry Brassard during a recent inspection tour.

Mr. Brassard, the town's fire inspector, said the school's fire alarm system may have been improperly installed and the placement of smoke detectors in the basement may not be adequate.

The board's plant manager, John Birett, says the school is not under the separate school board's jurisdiction because it is leased from the Halton board of education. He is also upset with the wording of Mr. Brassard's report. If the system is not right, then Mr. Brassard should say so, and the board will correct it, Mr. Birett said.

It would not be practical for the separate school board to undertake any major repairs to bring the building into line with the Ontario Building Code because the cost would be too high, he said.

A hydro inspector will visit the school to check on some of the matters mentioned by Mr. Brassard in his report. Mr. Birett said he has written to the Halton board of education, asking them to install two thermal detectors as Mr. Brassard recommended. He said the separate school board would be willing to pay the other board to install them.

Members of the St. Joseph's Parents Association included Mr. Brassard's report in their presentation to the board last month requesting the board to switch funds from a new school in Oakville to a new St. Joseph's. Plans for a new school in Acton have been on the boards for three years.

Meanwhile, parents of students at the school have adopted a "wait and see" attitude with regard to any options open to them in their fight for the new school.

The board has passed a motion to return to the ministry and seek more funding with the school, a representative of the parents and Halton MPP Julian Reed will be included in the delegation.

No date has been set for the meeting with the ministry yet.

Raiders keep admission low

Reminding hockey fans that they're still the best entertainment value in town, the Georgetown Chrysler Raiders have announced the following admission fee schedule for all exhibition games and regular season home games:

Adults - $2.50
Students - $1.75
Children - $1.00
Family - $6.50
Senior Citizens - no charge
Admission prices for the coming season remain identical to those of last year, representing the Raiders' attempt to help their fans cope with today's economy. "Considering all the various forms of entertainment in the Georgetown area and their respective admission prices, the Raiders are still one of the best entertainment values today," team officials point out.

The Raiders will be holding an informal golf tournament at the Halton County Inn near Milton Sept. 8. All players and executive members will participate and invite any fans who'd like to join the fun to call Dave Kenner, general manager, at 877-1113.

Nursing home fire could occur here

Halton nursing home operators say a disaster such as the fire which took the lives of 24 nursing home residents in Mississauga could easily happen here.

Centennial Manor administrator John Charlton agrees that a similar incident could occur here. Centennial Manor is a residence for 340 Halton senior citizens, located in Milton.

homes in the region, and concluded that the homes lack the equipment and the staff to cope with a major fire.

Halton's social service administrative supervisor Margaret Weightman says no comparable study is planned for Halton.

Mr. Charlton says a complete evacuation plan should be worked out for Centennial Manor. The residence is made up of two buildings, a single-storey housing 190 and a three-storey building housing 150. A plan to install smoke detectors in every room is now before the Ontario Fire Marshal for final approval.

Peel Social Services Commissioner Jim Crozier conducted a survey of 34 homes for the aged, luxury apartments for seniors, hotels and public and private nursing
