Publisher, Editor, and Staff
 The Georgetown Herald

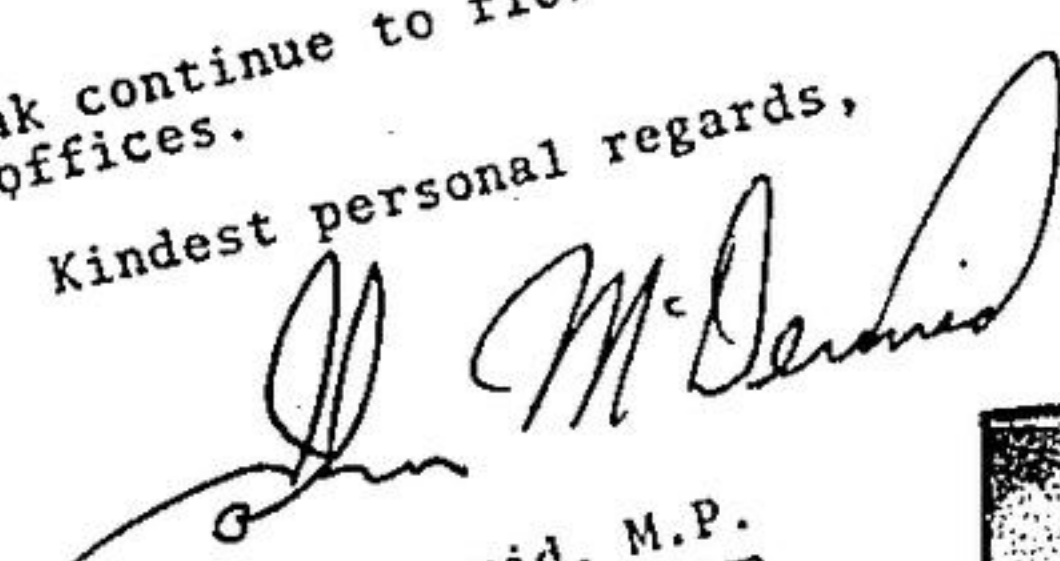

Please accept my most sincere congratulations on the occasion of the opening of The Georgetown Herald's new plant and offices.

I have no doubt the increased space afforded by the move will enhance your publication and greatly improve the working conditions for your staff.

As a young boy, I can remember my father receiving The Herald at our home in Brampton so that he could keep up with the news in his home town of Georgetown.

The Herald is an old friend of the McDermid family, and I am pleased that its service to the community will continue at this new location.

May the printer's ink continue to flow for many more successful years in your new offices.

Kindest personal regards,

 John McDermid, M.P.
 Brampton-Georgetown

Dear Paul:
 An historic event has taken place in Halton Hills with the opening of the new publishing headquarters of The Herald. The Georgetown Herald, as it was known until the 70's, occupied Main Street premises for 114 years.

Moving to its new quarters, it will now be running its own modern presses and continuing and expanding the fine tradition which has been a part of this community for so long. The enterprise of all those currently involved in its publication is to be congratulated as the paper looks to the future with great expectations.

Local newspapers are a vital part of the fabric of any community and in a modern world, it tends to deal with the ugly and the sensational. The Herald and newspapers like it provide a medium for the true expression of society, the good news, the thoughtful news, the facts, the activities, the hopes and aspirations of individual citizens and groups of citizens.

The population of our earth regardless of its size, is made up of an aggregate of communities who need communication on a community basis. The words "Congratulations" and "Good Luck" somehow seem inadequate when history turns a page, but we mean it, and wish you all the best in the future.

Yours sincerely,
 Julian Reed
